Great Aerial Blows

Cherbourg Under All-Out Assault By Land and Air

By VIRGIL PINKLEY

LONDON, June 22.—American forces have launched an all-out attack on Cherbourg by land and air with hundreds of planes blasting the German fortifications in one of the greatest aerial displays since D-Day while troops overwhelmed the suburban defence outpost of Martinvast.

Wave upon wave of American flight and medium bombers pounded the stunned German troops in the inner defences of Cherbourg in a pulverizing bid to blast open the ring of fortifications for the siege army battering the burning city's defences.

"A few hundred yards from where I sit the Germans in their fortifications are being blown to pieces by one of the greatest combined air and artillery barrages in history," British United Press War Correspondent Henry T. Gorrell reported from near Cherbourg.

He said the earth had been heaving convulsively for an hour and a half as tremendous formations of planes poured hundreds of tons of explosives into the Cherbourg fortifications, and then our artillery pounded enemy positions just ahead as infantry moved up for the attack, which headquarters spokesmen said had been launched by land as well as by air.

Time Out From Front Line

A Canadian forward patrol is relieved from front line fighting, and under cover, takes time out for a smoke. Many shrines like this one are to be seen along French roads and French-speaking Canadians are reminded of their own Province of Quebec.

Senator Warns:

Quebec History Teachings, 'Secret Society' Activities Disrupt Unity in Canada

OTTAWA, June 22.—(CP)—Senator T. D. Bouchard, in his maiden speech to the Senate, said yesterday that the activities of the Order of Jacques Cartier hampered the improvement of relationships between French and English speaking Canadians.

Senator Bouchard, chairman of Quebec Hydro, said steps should be taken to remedy conditions under which the teaching of history in Quebec was used to disrupt Canadian unity.

Speaking first in French and then in English, he said the results of the teaching of history in Quebec were "rather discouraging to those who thought and still persist in thinking we could build a large country in which the descendants of two great nations and two great cultures would live and thrive in peace and harmony."

IMPORTANT FRICTIONS

"A man of honest purpose has to concede that there are important frictions existing between the Canadians of French and English descent. The differences of religion and language are, though they should not be, the fertile fields where the sowers of the seeds of

U.S. Senate Acts

Approve Funds For Operating Canol Project

WASHINGTON, June 22—(AP)—A bristling letter from U.S. under-secretary of war Robert P. Patterson defending the army's $134,000,000 Canol Oil development in northwest Canada as an essential link in Allied strategy brought quick senate approval yesterday of a $16,439,588 appropriation to continue its operation.

"The completion and operation of Canol has been determined by the joint chiefs of staff to be a military necessity," Patterson wrote in a letter made public by Chairman Elmer Thomas (Dem.—Okla.) of the state war appropriations subcommittee.

DROPS OPPOSITION

Senator Homer Ferguson (Rep.-Mich.) withdrew his opposition after asserting that further expenditure on Canol is a responsibility for which the joint chiefs of staff "will have to answer after the veil of secrecy is lifted," although he called the project "utterly fantastic and ridiculous on its face."

The funds for the United States-financed refinery at White-horse, Y.T., and pipeline from Whitehorse to, Norman Wells, N.W.T., were included in a $45,-107,785,795 war department appropriations bill which the Senate passed and sent back to the House of Representatives for action on minor changes.

Asserting "it would be folly not to make use of these facilities," Patterson added:

"It is idle to contend that the petroleum products, including 100-octane gasoline, could be obtained more cheaply on the Pacific coast where our supply is inadequate, or from Aruba.

"We have neither tankers for its transportation to Skagway nor 100-octane gas in sufficient supply."

No-Confidence Move Possible On Draft Issue

By B. T. RICHARDSON
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, June 22—While the Progressive Conservative party has now made the calculated decision to challenge the Mackenzie King government on its conscription policy, in the opinion of most Ottawa observers, no indication has been given whether a vote of no-confidence in parliament will be moved by the small Progressive Conservative opposition group.

Following the demand made by C. P. McTague, national chairman, endorsed by John Bracken, national leader, that draftees of home defence duty should be made available immediately for overseas service, by order-in-council, political circles in Ottawa expect repercussions without much delay. The C.C.F. party, which has advocated conscription of wealth as part of a general conscription policy, will likely renew its attitude along this line. National C.C.F. leader, M. J.

Money Experts Are Blamed For Defence Debacle

OTTAWA, June 22.—(CP)—Pre-war re-armament programs and C.C.F. policies were involved in spirited discussions of the Commons Banking Committee today.

G. G. McGeer (L., Vancouver Burrard) said the bad advice of monetary experts had been responsible for the Empire "defence debacle."

"I disagree completely," said Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, a witness before the committee.

"Then you disagree with Churchill," said Mr. McGeer.

"If ever Mr. Churchill were so foolish as to say that, he was wrong," said Mr. Towers.

J. H. Blackmore, Social Credit house leader, said the question was whether financial experts had stood behind the defence policies which Production Speed-Up Seen By Vice-President of C.P.R.

Now that the invasion of Hitler's "Fortress Europe" is well launched, and prospects pointing to another good western crop, there should be a noticeable speeding up in the tempo of Canada's production which in the next few months will be reflected in increased traffic for the railways, said W. M. Neal, C.B.E., vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, Montreal, who visited Edmonton Wednesday in the course of an inspection tour. With him was W. A. Mather, vice-president of western lines, and local officials.

Also accompanying Mr. Neal is Hon. Philippe Brais, K.C., Montreal, leader of the Quebec Legislative Council, and vice-president of the Canadian Bar Association.

Mr. Neal and party arrived in Edmonton Wednesday evening from Calgary travelling on a track motor. The vice-president was greeted at the C.P.R. depot by officials of the company and C.P. Airlines.

He left Thursday morning by C. P. Airlines for Whitehorse, Yellowknife and Great Slave Lake. The party will return to Edmonton late Saturday.

TO MEET DEMANDS

The railways, said Mr. Neal, expect to handle whatever comes in stride, as they have been doing since the war transformed Canada from a primary producer into the world's fourth industrial nation.

Four Canadian Battalions Led Assault on Normandy

By ROSS MUNRO

WITH THE CANADIANS IN FRANCE, June 22.—(CP)—Four Canadian battalions—the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, the Regina Rifles, the Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto and the North Shore New Brunswick Regiment—were the heroic assault infantry units which stormed the fortified Norman beaches on the morning of D-Day.

Tanks from the 1st Hussars of London, Ont., and the Fort Garry Horse of Winnipeg were in the first assault, too, with daring assault sappers from the Royal Canadian Engineers and machine-gunners of the Cameron Highlanders of Otawa.

On the western flank a company of the Canadian Scottish from Victoria also was in the first wave to hit the beaches.

Names of these and other units which followed them up closely and rapidly joined in the battle were released for publication only today. The unit names previously had been held for security reasons.

Fourteen of Enemy Warships Sunk or Damaged by Planes

By WILLIAM F. TYREE

PEARL HARBOR, June 22.—The United States fleet defeated a powerful unit of the Japanese grand fleet off the Philippines on Monday, sinking or damaging 14 enemy warships, including four aircraft carriers and a battleship, to score one of America's greatest naval victories of the war.

An extraordinary announcement at Admiral Chester W. Nimitz' headquarters at 4 a.m. (7:30 a.m., M.D.T.) today revealed that planes of the United States Fifth Fleet pounced on the Japanese warships as they emerged from the channel between Luzon and Formosa.

In an air-sea battle reminiscent of Midway, the surface units never coming to grips, the Americans trounced the formidable Japanese force and sent its survivors limping back to the safety of their own waters.

The Americans lost 49 planes, today's communique said without mentioning loss of, or damage to, the ships of Admiral Raymond A. Spruance's Fifth Fleet.

The Japanese force comprised four or more battleships, five or six carriers, five fleet tankers and attached cruisers and destroyers. The preliminary official accounting of the attack said:

One aircraft carrier, believed to be of the Syokaku class, received three 1,000-pound bomb hits.

One carrier of the Hayataka class was sunk.

One carrier of the same class was badly damaged and left burning furiously.

One light carrier of the Zuiho or Taiho class received at least one bomb hit.

One battleship of the Kongo class was damaged.

One cruiser was damaged.

Three destroyers were damaged and one of them believed sunk.

Three tankers were sunk and the other two damaged and left ablaze.

Fifteen to 20 defending Japanese planes were shot down.

C.N.R. Restores Service Along Main Line West

Restoration of mainline railway services on the Canadian National Railway between Edmonton and Vancouver was announced Thursday by company officials.

The line between Edmonton and Edson had been blocked by washouts for a week, after heavy rainfall and flood conditions prevailing earlier in the month. In the meantime, all traffic to points west of Jasper was being routed over Canadian Pacific Railway lines to Calgary, making contact with Canadian National lines again at Kamloops.

A 250-foot trestle, crossing a 30-foot gulley, was completed by construction workers at noon Thursday. Building of the trestle was a major item of reconstruction at the washout scene.

Westbound trains were leaving the city somewhat behind schedule Thursday, but completely normal service was expected to be restored by Friday.

On the Coal Branch line of the C.N.R., running from Edmonton in to Coalspur, Mountain Park and Foothills, traffic was expected to be resumed by Thursday afternoon. Trains reached Foothills Wednes-

Reds Open New Drive Against Finnish Lines

By HARRISON SALISBURY
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1944, by British United Press

MOSCOW, June 22.—Red army forces, opening a new offensive against the faltering Finnish lines, sent a three-pronged drive around the lakes north of Leningrad today.

The Red Army, following up a whirlwind drive through Viipuri, hurled strong armored forces around Lake Onega in a determined effort to clear the 223-mile enemy-held stretch of the Leningrad-Murmansk railroad.

The new thrust through the Aunus peninsula between Lakes Onega and Ladoga and around the northern tip of Onega brought three Soviet forces striking deep into the wavering Finnish lines. Southwest of Lake Ladoga, Marshal Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad army continued its swift pursuit of Finnish troops northwest of captured Viipuri.

Advancing as much as ten miles at some points in the first day's operations, the Red Army over-ran more than 100 towns to seize footholds on the Leningrad-Murmansk railway at Lodeinoe Pole, near the eastern shore of Lake Ladoga, 129 miles northeast of Leningrad, and Vichka, five miles above Medvezhegorsk, near the northern tip of Lake Onega.

The Soviet troops, driving northward through the Aunus peninsula, were stretched over a 75-mile front along the Svir River connecting the two lakes, from Lodeinoe Pole to Voznesenye, where the river empties into Lake Onega.

Feeling Grows

Manning May Call Election During August

Growing belief that a provincial election will be called in Alberta this year was being expressed in Edmonton political circles Thursday. Rumored voting date is "sometime in August".

Government ministers questioned offered no comment on the rumor. It is understood the matter is under study by ministers and private members alike.

No caucus of Social Credit M.L.A.'s has been called, according to official sources. Such a meeting would be called in all probability, if it was decided the province should go to the polls, before summer is out.

According to some sources, tenders have been called on certain election printing. It has been stated, however, that this procedure is generally followed, in the year immediately prior to an election. (The present Legislature's term expires next April.) For the 1940 general election, printing of forms was started in 1939.

Many revisions and changes in election forms will be necessary in the next election, because of changes made in the Alberta Election Act by the last session of the Legislature.

Under provincial statutes, an election must be held in not less than 30 days, nor more than 40 days, after writs have been issued.

Both Social Credit and C.C.F. movements have been preparing for the eventuality of an election, and now have many candidates nominated.

At the present time, the Social Credit group has 23 candidates chosen, and the C.C.F. 29. The Independent party has nominated in a few constituencies.

Present standing of parties in the legislature is Social Credit, 35; Independent, 15; Liberal, 3; C.C.F., 1; Labor, 1; Independent Social Credit, 1 and vacant, 1. The vacant seat is the one held by the late Premier William Aberhart in Calgary.

Wainwright Flier Thinks Burma Rescue Is 'Dream'

ON THE BURMA FRONT, June 22.—A 30-year-old Wainwright, Alta., flier—FO. Wally Prosser—had such a close brush with death in the jungles of Burma that he still thinks it all like a dream.

Prosser was badly injured and knocked unconscious when his aircraft crashed hundreds of miles inside a wild and mountainous part of Burma. The rest of the crew were killed.

Prosser was brought to safety by the devotion and courage of an R.A.F. medical officer and flight sergeant who parachuted into the wilderness to carry him out. They had to carry Prosser through swamps, and steep mountain trails, with the Japs never far away, and the journey took a month.

Prosser was unconscious most of the time, and when he woke up in a Calcutta hospital, he looked around and exclaimed:

"It's almost too much to believe. It's like a dream."

70,000 Tanks, 60,000 Planes Lost

7,800,000 Nazis Killed, Captured By Soviets In Last Three Years

LONDON, June 22—(CP)—The Soviet information bureau, in a review on yesterday's third anniversary of German attack on Russia, reported last night that more than 7,800,000 Germans have been killed and captured in the three years of fighting.

During that same period, said the review broadcast from Moscow and relayed to London by the Soviet Monitor, Russian losses totalled 5,300,000 men killed, missing or captured.

HUGE ARMS LOSS

The information bureau said the Germans had lost 70,000 tanks, 60,000 airplanes and more than 90,000 pieces of artillery, while Russian losses were 49,000 tanks, 30,128 airplanes and 48,000 guns.

In the course of offensive battles," the review continued, "Soviet troops have liberated some 1,500,000 square kilometres ($79,200 square miles) of enemy-occupied territory and advanced nearly 2,000 kilometres (1,200 miles) to the west, reached our frontiers on a front of great length, and entered territory of Romania."

ALLIES GET CREDIT

The review said "a considerable contribution to the success of the Red Army was made by our Allies, the United States of America and Great Britain, who supplied us with very valuable strategic raw materials and arms and subjected Geramny's military objectives to systematic bombing and thereby undermined Germany's military might."

"The Germans today face complete defeat," it added.

Challenging German propaganda, the information bureau said "Unity of the Allied states now is more stable than ever before."

LAUD INVASION

"The brilliantly achieved invasion of northern France by British and Americn troops and the successful offensive of Allied troops in Italy signify that henceforth Germany will have to fight on European territory against the Red Army and the troops of our Allies, British and the U.S.A."

Great Aerial Blows

Port of Cherbourg Under All-Out Land, Air Attack

launched the final attack with the close support of Marauder, Havoc, Thunderbolt and Mustang planes.

Airmen returning from the sustained assault on the fortifications lying along the city limits said the Nazi defensive area directly below Cherbourg had been blasted into a wasteland of rubble and flame.

The Americans drove two great wedges into the coastal area east and west of Cherbourg, chopping the, trapped Germans into three isolated groups, and the fall of the great French port itself appeared imminent.

The headquarters announcement said that the all-out, evidently the final, assault on the city had begun and it might bring victory within a matter of hours.

Almost everywhere, Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's troops were massed around the city in strength at distances varying from two to four miles, and closer at some points, especially where mobile units were stabbing into the German fortifications.

CAPTURE HINGE

In closing in, the Americans captured Martinvast, some two and a half miles below Cherbourg proper, on which the Nazi had hinged their defence line running through the bar of hills hugging the city.

They captured St. Pierre Eglise, eight miles east of Cherbourg, and advanced a mile beyond it. Also taken was Quettehou, on the coast 13 miles southeast of Cherbourg, as well as Rufosses, five and a half miles southeast of the port.

While the Americans tightened the vise on Cherbourg and stepped up the pressure, British United Press correspondent Henry Gorrell reported from outside the city that the aerial assault was churning up the German fortifications along the south and southwest city limits, where gun emplacements were dug in on high ground which will have to be taken before the port can be occupied.

ARTILLERY READY

"Massed artillery is preparing similarly to saturate the area as soon as the bombers are through plastering the fortifications," Gorrell's dispatch, filed at 1 p.m., said.

There was little news from other sectors. The Americans advanced southwest down the road from Carentan at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula. Farther south U.S. troops in the St. Lo district reported increased German pressure. In the Tilly-Sur Seulles area fierce armored fighting was going on, with British forces holding fast everywhere.

The weather improved slightly, facilitating unloading at the invasion beaches as well as operations at the crucial hour when the planes were called in to help crush resistance at Cherbourg.

"War correspondents are moving up for a box seat for the final battle of Cherbourg," Henry T. Gorrell of the British United Press reported from outside the battered and burning French port.

"The enemy is manning his pillboxes of festung Cherbourg, waiting for us, and stiff fighting for the seaport is anticipated." Scores of towns and villages fell to Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley's troops closing in on Cherbourg, Gorrell reported, adding that the city's hours in German hands were believed numbered as the Allies prepared for a trip-hammer assault by land and sea.

One prong of the steel arc clamped against Cherbourg had cut the coastal highway to the east a short distance outside the city, and the other was within a few hundred yards of the one running west to Cap De La Hague.

The vanguard of the American column swinging east of Cherbourg hit the highway to St. Pierre-Eglise at several points, some of them southwest of Maupertus, five miles from the big port.

PROBE PERIMETER

During the night advanced spearheads carried out intensive reconnaissance against the perimeter of the Cherbourg fortress area, drawing shorn German reaction, while main assault forces were driving through the suburbs for the final battle.

Artillery hammered German positions and gun batteries throughout the night, with only occasional replies by the Nazi 88's. Some German minefields on the Cherbourg approaches turned out to be dummies when sappers investigated them.

The weather, unfavorable for flying for some days, was clearing, and there was every indication that Allied air forces were ready to join in the final assault on the Nazi garrison which ignored a surrender ultimatum and chose instead to make a fight of it.

Earlier front reports reaching Allied headquarters—admittedly 12 hours behind the actual fighting—placed the main American forces one to two miles below the city limits and two miles from the great harbor installations at the lower end of the inner basin.

"GOOD PROGRESS"

American patrols may have advanced even closer to the outskirts of the city, but an official spokesman said that up to noon yesterday the Americans had not penetrated the main defences of Cherbourg in any strength.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's 33rd communique of the invasion said that the American drive on Cherbourg had "continued to make good progress with advances of two to three miles along the entire front."

American field commanders were reported to have broadcast another ultimatum, this one expiring at 9 a.m. (1 a.m. M.D.T.) today, to the German garrison to surrender.

"If you don't hall the fight now, you will never see your homeland again," the London Daily Sketch quoted the ultimatum, said to have been broadcast over an army field station. "Thousands of planes are waiting for the signal to rain death on you. The guns of the Allied navies are aimed at you. You have no other way out than to capitulate."

NO SURRENDER

But there was no indication that the Germans heeded this warning any more than they heeded previous Allied bids for their surrender to escape annihilation. Radio Vichy said an "extremely violent" air and naval bombardment of Cherbourg had begun at 8:30 a.m. in the new crop moving, traffic will increase to even larger proportions.

From the German transocean agency came a report that American troops were being deployed along rocky heights around Cherbourg while battleships and warships pounded the city itself, but the agency added that there was "no sign of large-scale fighting yet in the fortress area."

Henry T. Gorrell, British United Press war correspondent on the approaches to Cherbourg, reported at 9 o'clock last night that the Germans were showing increasing signs of preparing for a fight to the last.

REINFORCE HOUSES

Refugees slipping through the enemy lines said the enemy had reinforced houses and other buildings as strong points for street fighting and appeared to be attempting to rally for a final stand after retreating in disorder from the south.

German demolition squads were said to be continuing their blasting of dock installations and other equipment which might be of use to the Allies following the inevitable fall of the big port. Eisenhower broadcast an appeal yesterday to French workers in Cherbourg to attempt to prevent the wrecking of their equipment and to have it ready for Allied use.

The Americans made their closest approach to the outskirts of Cherbourg—one to two miles—along the main road from the southwest, penetrating to within less than a mile of the suburb of Octeville yesterday noon.

Southeast of Cherbourg, another American column reached the Saire river near the village of Le Theil, five miles from the port and three miles below the sea at a point east of Cherbourg.

ISOLATE PORT

A third column outflanking Cherbourg from the west captured St. Croix-Hague, five and a half miles beyond Cherbourg, three miles from the sea and nine miles from the tip of Cap de la Hague.

The twin American advances east and west of Cherbourg steadily were isolating the port and promised to prevent its defenders from fleeing to either Cap de la Hague in the west of Barfleur in the east for another stand. American patrols already were pushing toward both extremities.

No changes were reported from other sectors of the front. Enemy artillery and mortar fire was described as unusually heavy in the Tilly-Sur-Seulles area, where violent British-German tank battles have been raging. Patrol activity also was reported.

WEATHER BAD

The Allies still were fighting bad weather on the beaches and in the ed up sizeable waves in the Channair. A strong northwest breeze kicked, complicating landing operations, while low clouds limited air activity yesterday to longer assault missions against railway and canal communications northeast of Paris and the vital supply network between Paris and Charters.

Pamphlets dropped by the Allied air forces on Cherbourg yesterday disclosed that the entire German 716th infantry division was killed or captured in the first three days of the invasion.

"Their stories are a warning to all troops in the Atlantic wall who are waiting for relief," the pamphlet warned.

A second leaflet dropped on Cherbourg warned the troops there that they had had only a foretaste of Allied air power—"nothing to what the total Allied air fleets could shower on you should the need arise."

Vice-President Of C.P.R. Pays Visit to City

1,200 cars of wheat delivered daily at the lakehead to keep the movement flowing properly and this, Mr. Neal said, throws no burden on the rail carriers which can easily take care of this traffic in addition to large commitments in the handling of other commodities including heavy war traffic.

"The railways," Mr. Neal explained, have never been the bottleneck, to use that much-abused term. Railways can deliver goods faster than they can be disposed of, actually. As far as delivery of grain at the lakehead is concerned, the situation has been governed more by the labor situation at the terminal elevators and docks than by the railways' ability to deliver cars.

The railway official, recently honored by the King with the decoration, Commander of the British Empire, for his service to the Empire in the field of war transportation, said he had one word of advice and warning for the public:

BUY COAL NOW

"Buy your coal now?" he said, "don't wait until the cold weather, but fill your basement now." He explained that mines are now working at less than capacity through lack of domestic orders. Retail dealers lacked the storage space and financial resources to lay in heavy stocks against fall and winter orders, and it is up to householders to lay in their supplies during the summer.

Mr. Neal said that while the railways have been handling record traffic on passenger trains as with freight trains . . . "I am proud to say there has been no let-down in air service for passengers. So far as we are concerned the war will never be an excuse for any slackening of effort."

He added that he and other officers of the company had received hundreds of gratifying letters from passengers who complimented the company on being able to render such service under war conditions. "The spirit of loyalty among our employees which makes such service possible," Mr. Neal said, "cannot be bought or sold. As a company, it is our most precious possession."

TRAFFIC FIGURES UP

Traffic figures, Mr. Neal said, are running ahead of 1943, chiefly because the volume of war movement has been heavier this year than for the corresponding period of last year. By July 1 with the new

With the easing of the steel situation, however, the Canadian Pacific is taking delivery of a steadily increasing number of locomotives and badly-needed freight-car units, including gondolas for ore and coal shipments. The program's largest delivery of some 70 new locomotives of large and modern type, many of them for service in western Canada.

Much of Mr. Neal's present tour of some 4,000 miles of western branch lines is being made by truck motor, which, he said, is the best way to see the country.

"Many people back east find it hard to understand my enthusiasm for the beauty of the prairies," he said. "But the month of June in the west is a lovely place to be, especially when the country is as green and fresh as it is now."

LONDON, June 22.—The Allied aerial offensive switched from Berlin to the Battlefields of northern France today as hundreds of British and American planes raked the blazing port of Cherbourg with bombs and gunfire and smashed again at the Nazi robot plane catapults in the Pas de Calais area.

Wave upon wave of Allied fighter-bombers rocketed in over Cherbourg early this afternoon and pounded the cornered enemy garrison savagely for a full hour.

As they turned away, the U.S. 9th air force's hard-hitting Marauders and Havocs thundered in to heap new destruction on the burning port.

Simultaneously, a force of about 250 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, covered by an equal number of fighters, laid a great weight of explosives squarely across the ramps from which the Nazis have been hurling their pilotless planes against southern England.

BERLIN ATTACKED

The twin blows followed an R.A.F. night attack on Berlin during which lightning-fast Mosquito bombers stoked fires blazing in the enemy capital from a 2,000-plane American daylight raid.

Part of the American force comprising more than 1,000 heavy bombers and a great equal number of fighters, swept on to new bases in Russia, opening the first shuttle operations with Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

Airforce spokesmen hinted that the main weight of the Allied bombing campaign could be expected to be brought back again to "proper strategic targets" inside Germany, now that the invasion beachheads in northern France have been established firmly and the need for heavy bomber support has diminished.

MEET FEW FIGHTERS

These sources said only about 200 fighters were met over the Reich during the daylight raids Tuesday and Wednesday, contrasted with the fleets of 600 or more planes the luftwaffe was able to bring into battle several months ago.

day, on the eastern spur from Coalspur, and washouts on the west spur to Cadomin and Mountain Park are expected to be repaired today.

Meanwhile, the Canadian Red Cross Society is moving to the flood victims of the Westlock district, where the Pembina and Paddle Rivers have overrun their banks in the worst flood of the area's history.

Elmer E. Roper, M.L.A., chairman of the Edmonton branch of the Red Cross, announced that Robert Muir, secretary-manager of the local branch, and A. H. Skersfield, chairman of the provincial disaster relief committee, are now at Westlock surveying actual damage conditions.

George MacLachlan, M.L.A. for Pembina constituency, appealed Wednesday for assistance from the Red Cross.

IS DESPERATE

"The situation up there is pretty desperate," Mr. Roper said. "Many people have lost everything they had—bedding, clothing, food, personal belongings."

"The Red Cross will supply whatever is needed, according to results of the survey by the two officials."

In a message to Edmonton Thursday morning, Mr. Muir said he was leaving for Jarvis by boat, the only practicable means of transportation in the flooded area. Jarvie is about 25 miles north and slightly west of Westlock.

According to reports received by the R.C.M.P. in Edmonton, flood waters are still receding, although it will be some time before normal conditions are reached.

Thursday's weather forecast for the city reads "Increasing cloudiness, becoming overcast and cool with occasional light rain tonight." Maximum temperature Wednesday was 74 degrees, and the minimum, 50 degrees.

The highway traffic board lifted truck and bus bans in the portion of the province lying south of the North Saskatchewan River, and east of the Edmonton-Calgary highway.

NORTH OF RIVER

North of the Saskatchewan, the ban was lifted as follows: in M.D. of Sturgeon, No. 548; M.D. of Morinville, No. 549; M.D. of Stony Plain, No. 520; Highway No. 28, Edmonton to Waskatenau; Highway No. 16, Edmonton to Entwistle; Highway No. 18, Clyde to Westlock, and Highway No. 37, Fort Trail to Namao and Gibbons.

Maj.-Gen. Keller

Third Division's General Even Digs Own Foxholes

By ROSS MUNRO

WITH THE CANADIANS IN FRANCE, June 22.—(CP)—This is Maj.-Gen. R. F. L. Keller, Canadian field commander in France.

He is husky and rugged and is every inch the combat soldier. He digs his own slit trenches and one day a high British officer called on him at headquarters to find him in shirt sleeves, shovelling away at a fox hole by his caravan where he works. The caravan also is dug into the earth for headquarters has been in the line of fire in this narrow eastern section of the beachhead.

Keller is up on the front line daily with his aide de camp, Capt. Charlie Turton of Montreal.

There was the time the General was in a tank and Turton was riding in an armored car just five yards behind. They were going along a road which led to Bretteville. A German 88-MM. gun spotted the two vehicles and a shell screamed between the tank and the armored car, bursting 10 yards away from the road. When they got back to headquarters they also found machine-gun bullet marks on the armor plating.

The general's ship lay just off the French coast during the landings on D-day with the general watching the progress of the early fighting ashore from the bridge. About 11 a.m. he decided to go ashore but the sea was rough and he did not make it until 1 p.m. when he landed at Berniers, where one Canadian unit fought an heroic battle on the beaches.

Four Canadian Battalions Led Invasion Attack

signalmen, who so gallantly attacked the elaborate beach defences and fought for every sand dune, trench system and concrete gun emplacement until they cracked the vaunted west wall defences along this canadian sector.

You cannot praise these men enough. They were the spearhead in this murderous picture and had a bloody triumph on the beaches where brave men fell and their comrades fought on until the German line was shattered.

The breaking of that line was one of the finest offensive feats carried out in this war. Here in the beachhead we still view it with wonder.

GRIM INFANTRY TASK

Bombardment from the sea and air helped to soften up the defences but the grim infantry task remained and those leading invasion troops had to cross a flat beach raked with machine-gun bullets and hack their way through tangles of barbed wire and break their way into the trench and pillbox system to drive out the German defenders with bayonet, grenade and machine-gun.

The momentum of the attack never slowed down and the Canadians fought right through to their final objectives at Bretteville on the Caen-Bayeux highway.

There was no initial advance like this in the whole Allied invasion effort and it was the Winnipegs, the Reginas, the Canadian Scottish and the Hussars, Gen. Montgomery, the Allied commander, referred to when he complimented a western brigade for its first-day push.

Gen. Montgomery told correspondents June 11 that this showing was "excellent."

hold in the Marianas islands a day after the Japanese Domei News Agency reported that a Tokyo naval spokesman would have a big naval victory to announce.

In the same communique Nimitz revised upward from 300 to 353 the number of Japanese planes shot down in the attack on the American fleet off the Marianas Sunday.

It disclosed for the first time that in the Sunday engagement two U.S. aircraft carriers and one battleship received superficial damage, and 21 planes were lost in combat. The fighting ability of the warships was not impaired by the slight damage to them.

The communique said nothing of U.S. naval damage in the Monday battle off the Philippines, and it was indicated that no information was available yet.

HEAVIEST BLOWS

The heaviest blows in the air-sea battle off the Philippines were struck in the last daylight hours of Monday. After darkness closed in, the Japanese broke off the engagement and fled westward toward the channel between Formosa and Luzon, from which they emerged.

Nimitz disclosed that the U.S. victory was so decisive that units still are ranging the battle area three days later in search of American airmen who may have survived from the lost planes. Many of the crewmen landed in the water at night, and an undetermined number already have been rescued.

The fleet units were commanded by Admiral Spruance, while the carrier task force was under the immediate tactical command of Vice Admiral M. H. Mitscher.

were followed and led to difficulty.

Mr. Towers said he knew no expert with such a role.

Hon. R. B. Hanson (P.C.-York-Sunbury) said he wondered where the C.C.F. had stood in respect to defence policies.

"You can't talk of the C.C.F. lightly," said Mr. McGeer. "The C.C.F. appears to have much more of the confidence of the Canadian people than either of the older parties."

"You may think that," said Mr. Hanson.

C.C.F. OPPOSED

Hughes Cleaver (L.-Halton) said it would be recalled that the C.C.F. had opposed defence appropriations before the war.

"As soon as you mention political parties my mind becomes a blank," said Mr. Towers.

Joseph Noseworthy (C.C.F.-York South) said the whole question of

Protest Mine Claims Unpaid By Government

OTTAWA, June 22—(CP)—Thomas A. Sutton, chairman of a committee of Eldorado mine shareholders, said yesterday a letter has been sent to Prime Minister Mackenzie King protesting alleged nonpayment of claims made by shareholders in the mine which was expropriated by the Dominion. He said copies have also been sent to Progressive, C.C.F. and Social Credit leaders.

Mr. Sutton said payment was made to him some time ago but he said he had emphasized that he considered it an "interim payment," and that he was free to take further action later. Other shareholders made the same reservation and payment to them was refused on order of Munitions Minister Howe, Mr. Sutton said.

OTTAWA, June 22—(CP)—A spokesman from the munitions department said here yesterday that 85 per cent of the government-expropriated Eldorado mine stock had been turned in by shareholders. He was commenting on a statement from Thomas A. Sutton, Hamilton, Ont., chairman of a shareholders' committee, protesting alleged non-payments of claims made by shareholders.

The spokesman said he could only point to Munitions Minister Howe's statement in the House on Jan. 28 which said for matters of security the reason for the mine expropriation could not be given and that various elements including the current market value of the stock were taken into consideration in reaching a $1.35 a share valuation.

NOTED FOR DONKEYS

NICOSIA.—(CP)—Cyprus is noted for its donkeys and mules. The government maintains a stud farm at Athalassa and stud stables throughout the island.

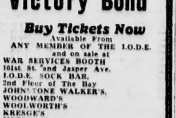

C.C.F. policies had been threshed out in the Saskatchewan election and he was prepared to accept the decision of the majority which accepted the C.C.F. program rather than the "few thousand" who voted Progressive Conservative.

It was a protest vote against the Liberal government," said G. K. Fraser (P.C.-Peterborough West).

Warns History Used to Disrupt Canadian Unity

discord work day and night, but mostly in the dark . . .

"History has taught that nearly every revolution has started under the influence of secret societies . . . one was founded around 1928 with the blessing of the Catholic and French clergy under the name of the Jacques Cartier Order."

He said that under the former L'Union Nationale government in Quebec, which he described as the "first governmental offspring" of the Jacques Cartier Order, regulations were passed in Quebec to shorten the English tuition in schools.

LEARN NO ENGLISH

"The movement against teaching English in our primary schools was intensified and it had come to a point where fathers and mothers noted that their sons and daughters were making no progress in the English language," he said.

Senator Bouchard spoke on a motion by Senator L. A. David (L.-Quebec) calling for the appointment by the proposed Dominion-provincial conference of a committee to prepare a text book on Canadian history acceptable to all provinces. A major portion of his speech was devoted to the activities of the Order of Jacques Cartier.

"It is my firm belief that at least 75 per cent of the members of this order (Jacques Cartier), numbering according to the most recent information, around 18,000, are good British citizens who do not suspect where they are being pushed by the fanatics of every description who are the real leaders of this secret society," he said. "Imagine the harm that can be done by these active agents of destruction in a more or less passive population as the one living in my province."

QUOTES SECRET ORGAN

He quoted "L' Emerillon," which he described as the secret organ of the order, as forecasting "French domination in the more or less near future" in Ontario.

"Our French masses in the north, especially," he quoted from the paper, "shall finish to weigh so heavily on the population of the centre and south of the old Upper Canada that on each side we shall perhaps think of a secession to the end of creating a new province, French by a great majority."

"Canadian history should not serve as a tool of subversive propaganda in the hands of those who are aiming to disrupt the confederation system and to overthrow our form of democratic government," he said.

Senator Bouchard quoted extracts from a history of Canada approved for primary schools in Quebec in 1910 which, he said, contained contradictory statements illustrating that the teaching was "made intentionally to prejudice the young minds against our compatriots of a different tongue and creed."

He said he could not agree with the views of "some of our citizens higher up" that no attention should be paid to subversive activities.

"The false philosophy that has been created in the minds of the French-Canadians by the wrong teaching of Canadian history has led many of them to wish for an independent form of government," he said. "Seeing only the wrongs that they have been shown in the vividest light possible by our self made historians of inventive minds they seem to be blind on the advantages we have derived from our association with the British government."

TUITION SHORTENED

Influence of the Jacques Cartier Order has led to a shortening of English tuition in Quebec schools.

"The Bloc Populaire . . . is the open political tool of the Jacques Cartier Order and it may be that, at the last moment, if the liberty loving people do not open their eyes in good time they will see to what extent underground work has undermined our free institutions," he said.

Nearly every revolution had found its origin in secret societies and although there had been preaching against such organization the Jacques Cartier Order had been founded in 1928 with the blessing of the Roman Catholic church. Subsequently the officers of the order gave secret instructions for invasion of the political field.

"The invitation has been well received and nearly all Saint John Baptiste societies, Catholic syndicates, city school commissions, municipal councils, juniors boards of trade are under the influence of this secret order," he said.

URGED CATHOLIC STATE

In 1937 Monsignor Mozzoni, charge d'affaires of the apostolic delegation in Canada, had recommended "an entirely Catholic state."

"In 1944 the situation has gone from bad to worse," Senator Bouchard continued. "More and more young men have left school with that deformation of the mind proceeding from the bad teaching of Canadian history and the underground propaganda has increased in intensity."

The Jacques Cartier Order had issued instructions to its officers in Ontario to discourage any tendency toward understanding between French and English Canadians, he said.

The secret publication of the Order, L'Emerillon, in 1937 had advocated as a national flag for French Canadians a design with royal blue background with a large white cross and fleur-de-lis at the four corners. Three weeks ago such a flag was raised over the Montreal University building."

MANY "PLAY WITH FIRE"

"This was done at the top of the mountain centering the largest city in Canada and in the presence of thousands and thousands of citizens brought there by the blessing by an eminent Catholic priest of the old flag of Louis XV as the national flag of Canadians of French descent," he said. "Evidently there are lots of people who play with fire without knowing it."

One of the most active and open organizations of the Jacques Cartier Order was the Young Laurentians, he said.

No-Confidence Move Possible On Draft Issue

Coldwell, speaking to the press, indicated that would still be his party's position, though the parliamentary caucus has not considered the situation created by the McTague announcement.

PLANS NOT MADE

Likewise, the parliamentary caucus of the Progressive Conservative party, has not formulated plans for introducing the conscription issue in parliament. The decision to adopt an all-out conscription policy, it is understood, was not made by the Progressive Conservative caucus, but rather at a meeting of party leaders and supporters at Toronto over the week-end.

Hitherto, the Liberal government's conscription policy, based on law passed in 1940, has escaped serious challenge on the floor of parliament. That the issue should now be raised deliberately has aroused immediate attention in possible reactions in Quebec. To leave 75,000 draftees at home, Mr. McTague declared, can only be construed as deference to the will of the minority in the province of Quebec."

Belief that the conscription issue might impart a strong anti-Quebec flavor to the next federal election campaign exists in some quarters. The Ottawa Journal yesterday, for instance, stated the issue bluntly to be "whether the Canadian government is responsible to the majority of Canadians or to a minority in Quebec." This marked a diversion from the McTague argument that the Quebec vote in 1941 plebiscite no longer reflects the will of the people of Quebec.

RACIAL DISTURBANCE

Rise of racial disturbances in Quebec in which men in uniform and civilians have been involved has not passed unnoticed in Ottawa.

Tuesday 200 English-language airmen from an R.C.A.F. station at Valleyfield, Quebec, forcibly released a colleague who had been arrested by French-speaking policemen of Valleyfield after a street brawl.

Later a French-speaking policeman was attacked in the street by a group of airmen. Facing a charge of attempted murder in Montreal is a young French-Canadian, and this case arises out of so-called "zoot suit" riots early in June.

While the description "zoot suit riot" has been used by some quarters to describe street brawling in Montreal, other observers have reported racial feelings at the bottom of the outbreaks.

Britain's Tempest Fighters Knock Down 'Doodle Bugs'

By ALAN RANDAL

AN R.A.F. STATION IN SOUTHERN ENGLAND, June 22. —(CP)—It's tremendous the way the young pilots at this fighter station have adjusted their methods of attack to counter the menace of the Germans' pilotless plane, which the pilots call the "doodle bug."

As it happens, Britain has come up with a new weapon to counter the Nazis' new stroke. The new British weapon is the latest fighter—the Tempest—the fastest thing with wings.

I watched yesterday while these Tempest pilots headed down Doodle Bugs headed into Southern England. The pilots told me they are getting a big percentage of all the Doodle Bugs.

One key man is Wing Cmdr. R. P. (Bee) Beamont, D.S.O., D.F.C. with bar. He is the leader of this R.A.F. unit which includes two Tempest squadrons.

In one period of an hour and a half they knocked down seven out of seven they saw.

F/O. Dick Wilgate, an R.A.F. pilot who trained in North Battleford, Sask., and Penhold, Alta., and married a Calgary girl, has three destroyed.

Cultural Centres

Sixteen national associations of artists, authors, musicians, architects and players have requested the Dominion Government for an appropriation of ten million dollars to assist in establishing cultural and art centres throughout the country.

This is a fundamentally essential project if Canadian national life is to develop along the lines that people of culture have mapped out for it. Science has been able to provide life, economics should be able to make it more secure. But only the arts, in a material way, can enrich it.

Science, economics and politics are concerned with the stability of human life. The arts are concerned with the breadth and sweetness of it. The one gives quantity to existence; the other gives quality.

It would seem to be obvious, then, and beyond all argument that cultural development is complementary to scientific, economic and political development. No life can be full and complete without all of them.

It is equally obvious that an allotment of ten million dollars to such a purpose is pitifully inadequate. If the thing is worth doing at all, it is worth doing on a scale at least ten times as great.

There is only one point to be considered. If economic and cultural development are complementary to each other, which should take precedence in point of national policy?

One thing seems to be clear; there is precious little use of making music and the arts available to hungry and disheartened people. No amount of culture will unload the burden of perpetual debt off the shoulders of a people carrying a private monopolistic monetary system. Art cannot take the place of social security. Museums and statuary will not give desperate men work and shelter.

Social security, monetary reform and housing provisions come first. After these, the Canadian people will support cultural centres to the fullest possible extent.

It is a bad thing to deprive human life of opportunities for culture. It is a bad thing to deprive human life of security and freedom. It would be a worse thing if Canada should make so exceedingly many plans that Canadians should be deprived of all of them.

Another Satellite Gone

Finland is getting out of the war the hard way, having refused to stay out, and refused also to get out the easy way. Sympathy naturally goes to a small nation battling a powerful antagonist. But the Finns brought disaster upon themselves. They were at peace with Russia when Hitler launched his assault upon that country just three years ago. They joined him in expectation that he would overthrow at once Russia's expense. They have given great assistance to the Fuehrer, by holding large Russian forces on the far northern front to protect the railway to Murmansk. Moscow has for months been trying to induce Helsinki to make peace. For whatever reason, they refused. What followed was inevitable. Russia could not afford to leave its flank exposed, nor keep a powerful army there, when it opens an all-out drive toward Berlin.

Hitler does not seem to have responded by doing much to help the Finns when they were attacked. So far as the indications show he practically deserted them by withdrawing his troops and leaving them to do the fighting lone-handed. They could hardly in the circumstances have expected anything else, for they had refused the pleas to meet nearer at hand. Britain and the United States did everything possible to persuade Helsinki to accept the Russian overtures, without effect. It can hardly be supposed there that Russia's allies can now intervene to secure mild terms for the little state. The boundary, which Hitler was to establish to the satisfaction of the Finns, will be drawn by the Russians, with first consideration for their own security.

Regrettable as it is that Finland took this fatal course, its defeat means that another Axis satellite has been knocked out, that the northern supply route to Russia will be safe, and that Allied forces immobilized in that remote area can be thrown into the main battle.

Edmonton Squadron Fund

The joint appeal made by the City of Edmonton and the Lions' Club for $15,000 for the City of Edmonton Sqadron is one to which all citizens should respond generously.

The City of Edmonton Squadron has a magnificent record in the war. It adds glory and fame to this community.

There is no better way in which Edmonton people can show their appreciation and their pride than in an early and extensive response to this appeal.

Donations may be made at any city bank. They should be made before Saturday.

V

Less Pleasure Driving

Hon. C. D. Howe has given notice that gasoline rationing will have to be made more stringent "should war consumption continue at the present level." As there is no prospect that war consumption will lessen, motorists will have no illusions as to the actual outlook. The strong probability would seem to be that war needs will go up as tanks and trucks get moving over constantly widening areas in France, as the air attack grows even more furious, and as oil-burning warships carry the war nearer to Japan.

Unless appearances deceive, civilian rationing can be tightened up considerably without halting war work or interfering with essential industry. There is plenty of ocular evidence that joy-riding is far from extinct in Canada. If civilian supplies have to be still further restricted, it is to be supposed the curtailment will be applied first to those who drive for pleasure and in the second place to those who drive merely for convenience. In those directions there seems to be room to do a substantial amount of fuel saving; perhaps enough that supplies for industrial and commercial use will not have to be cut down.

Seemingly the younger element in Quebec city think their province has as many parties in the legislature as it needs. When a Labor-Progressive meeting was called there to nominate a candidate for the provincial elections "two thousand youths" stormed the hall and broke up the meeting, the police according to Tim Buck out of town with his speech undelivered. The same youths would of course insist that if they chose to hold a meeting the police should not allow anybody to interfere with them. There are some peculiar ideas of democracy floating about in Canada just now.

The French collaborationist Marcel Deat complains that France's "neutrality" has been infringed by the Allied invasion, and that the wicked Anglo-Americans have stolen the French Empire. This tender solicitude for French rights and property will not count for much once the Fighting French get hands on Mercel.

In some Normandy pill-boxes which had walls from ten to twelve feet thick, Canadians found Germans dead from concussion. Shells and bombs did not smash the walls but they sent deadly vibrations through the space inside. A comparable safety device would be to crawl into a huge boiler when some one is ready to play on it with a trip hammer.

A Letter Can Be Short But it Must Be Human

How to Write Interestingly to the Boys on Battle Line

By J.N.S. in the Ottawa Journal

Everyone who returns from overseas says that what our men over there want most are letters from home. Everyone at home wants to write but to most of us the business of writing letters overseas doesn't come easy.

If we write them about our leisures and pleasures we feel guilty. If we write them of our home war effort we feel silly. How do you complain to a soldier about the inferior quality of wartime golf balls?

Yet there must be answers. Indeed, enough have returned have made clear that they want to know about our leisures and pleasures, our war effort, our golf balls, about everything. "It isn't so much the big events as the personalities," said one. "Tell us about Pete's old car, whether the Misses Jones bought that vacant lot, and how come Dorothy didn't marry that teacher she was engaged to."

Not very long ago there was a piece in the Atlantic about letters to overseas. It urged that letters be not so much an art as a way of life. It said:

"The first necessity in letter writing is to speak directly to the receiver, as in telephoning. The most important thing in a letter is the sound of the sender's voice, the inflections, the lowering for serious matters, the careless 'tossoff' of the inconsequentialities, the pauses to point the absurd, the tone that gives a simple word the vibrations of passionate love. Somehow these must be there.

"The letter must be quick and alive. And not alive with oneself alone. The children must be made to grow up on paper, their virtues and humors faithfully charted . . . so that all the happy sounds of a house a father feels as he opens the front door, and is greeted by a household that is calm and confident in its very bones, rise from the inky lines of the letter."

But if we are to study the business of writing letters we can go back much farther than a recent Atlantic. The power of a letter is no new discovery. Pliny the Younger expressed his hunger many centuries ago, just about the same hunger as our men overseas must feel today. "There is nothing to write about, you say. Well, then, write and let me know just this—that there is nothing to write about."

It seems that then as now people liked letters most that were like visits. We don't postpone a visit to a neighbor until we have momentous news for him. We just drop in and chin about this and that. The men overseas want only to lean over their back fence; never mind trying to drive up their front lawn to make a speech.

As to the length—it probably depends on quality. A short letter, said Dr. Boswell, is an insult like that of a slight or cursory salutation. But Boswell was surely wrong. A short letter, written with care, can be the warmest embrace or a full plate of good news. It is probably harder to write a short letter than a long one. Every word must count, every thought must be in order. But the short letter is a joy to receive, both for the receiver—and let Boswell go hang. The viciousness of his advice is that if we follow it we will all put off writing letters until we can write long ones—and you know what that means.

As to handwriting—the ideal answer is a typewriter. The fellow reading a letter from his love will doubtless gladly stand on his head to decode her pretty marks or get sunburned from reading her first traces before the glare of a high voltage searchlight. But short of love letters the last work on unreadable handwriting was penned by some unknown worthy to Prof. Edward Sylvester Morse. Said he to the professor:

"It was very pleasant to me to get a letter from you the other day. Perhaps I should have found it pleasanter if I had been able to decipher it. I don't think that I mastered anything beyond the date (which I knew) and the signature (which I guessed at). There's a singular and perpetual charm in a letter of yours: it never grows old, it never loses its novelty. . . . Other letters are read and thrown away and forgotten, but yours are kept and remembered. One of them will last a reasonable man a lifetime."

As for love letters—there is no advice that will be taken anyway. Alfred de Musset warned simply: "In love matters, keep your pen from paper." But if this is unsatisfactory, as it surely is, there is a little verse by Emily Dickinson which correspondents may care to shuffle back and forth along with their accounts of cabbages and kings.

It goes:

"Going to him! Happy letter!
Tell him—
Tell him the page I didn't write;
Tell him I only said the syntax,
And left the verb and pronoun out."

This will still leave many a soldier more than somewhat unsatisfied. A blankin' some lil poor substenance when a man's hungry. But this is no Dorothy Dix column, and short of advising against the sending of carbon copies with simply the addresses changed we leave the matter to the lovelorn to settle. They'll decide it anyway.

If this piece has slipped into feeble humor it is only because one hesitates to deal seriously with love letters in public. But for the rest—for the general subject of writing letters overseas there is no slapstick humor. Letters save lives. Have no doubt about it. There is ample evidence of how much they are wanted over there; and ample evidence that all they need to be is a reflection of ourselves and our everyday doings. We don't need to make them polished essays. And if we send the Letter From Home The Bulletin publishes every Saturday for the troops we don't even need to make them news reports. Just a visit: that's all they want from us. But if we postpone, let us be warned by Margaret Sangster:

The tender word forgotten,
The letter you did not write,
The flower you might have sent, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts tonight,

Hooray for realism—and the suicide of humanity!

Post-War Commitments Should Be Specific

Allies Are Held Together Only by Definite Objectives

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Walter Lippmann, commenting some days ago on "Wilson's crucial mistake," found that if President Wilson had agreed to a "specific and separate German treaty" to have the United States help enforce German disarmament over a fixed period of years, he would have obtained ratification. Such a treaty would have kept the Allies together for the single task of keeping Germany disarmed. But Wilson insisted upon giving the League a world - wide commitment and it was against this that the senate rebelled. Mr. Lippmann therefore suggests that with regard to pledges to use force in the future we confine ourselves to treaties "definite in object and limited in time" embodied, not in the charter of a new international organization, but in the treaties by which we settle with enemies.

Dorothy Thompson

The new League should incorporate no pledges to use force for if we invest a league with military power, "we have no choice but to invest it with the greatest military powers dominant," since none of the big three would consent to leave at the mercy of fifty or sixty nations to move its army. The small European powers can, of course, be brought in to collaborate in keeping Germany disarmed.

Since this is apparently what is actually cooking let us consider what it implies. The Allies are to be held together solely by the fear of a revived Germany and Japan. Force to maintain peace will be available only against present enemies. Three highly armed powers, backed by the most identical interests, will agree only on the proposition that our present enemies may never rearm.

This is what is called realism, under which the seething passion of the years for an end of war could be betrayed again.

It is true that no great nations will tolerate having their armies beaten by the vote of other nations. The solution, of course, would be to make an all-inclusive representative world organization competent to create and adjudicate international law and empowered with its own forces recruited on a quota basis, to enforce it.

The peoples of the world may be ready for this. I dare all governments, allied and enemy, to submit this question to plebiscite. But our leaders are not ready for it. They repudiate it in advance.

Yet the three great allies will not be held together indefinitely by the sole desire to keep down present enemies, once they are defeated. If Germany and Japan are to be the only cement, let us keep them menacing—as the only promise of peaceful unity in the rest of the world! Otherwise it is childish to assume that one or two decades hence the German or Japanese past menace will be the chief concern of the great powers. Already, before this war is even won, we see from the policies of the Allied statesmen that their fear for the future is as much of each other as of the enemy. The greatest concern of the Anglo-American powers is already that Russia should be checked in Europe, and of Russia that the Anglo-Americans should not rule there.

Germany was able to rearm not because the Reich, even ten years ago, was strong and the Allies weak. France, Britain and Russia without the United States, were quite strong enough to deal with Germany. But previous allies had hoped to balance their power against each other by means of Germany.

Thus, the last war was hardly over when, in 1922, Russia signed the treaty of Rapallo with Germany and from then until Hitler came to power collaborated closely even with the reichswehr.

After Hitler, the governments of Britain and France made concessions to an "anti-Communist" Germany that they had never made to the republic. Germany could not have obtained the essential materials for rearmament except from generous trading agreements with the western nations; Germany rearmed on the sea by treaty with Britain; Germany rearmed on land openly, without causing a soldier to move in France. Germany put herself in a position to defend her positions by open collaboration with Britain and France.

Formal treaties were abrogated, among them the Franco-Russian, The Little Entente, which was an alliance for the "specific and limited" purpose of protecting the succession states from a revival of Austrian and Hungarian power collapsed utterly, the Anschluss and the disintegration of Czechoslovakia, essential for a German drive to the southeast, not opposed but assisted by France and Britain.

These are the dreary facts as is the fact that under Mr. Lippmann's proposal there is no guarantee that ten years after the war "peace-loving" nations, and "wicked aggressors" will fly the same flag as today. Nor is there any certainty that Europe will forever regard Germany as the chief menace to her security and progress.

Either the world will be organized under universal self-created law abiding on all and enforced by mutually erected instruments or it will again base its peace on precarious alliances and balances, dubious treaties, and egotistic national interests. Then eventually we may realize the war, foreseen by President Roosevelt—the "war between continents," that will "end western civilization."

Japanese Know Our Strategy in Advance

Hazards in Bomb Attacks Now Planned Over 'Home Islands'

By MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON—How many people knew that the bombing of Japan by the new formidable B-29 was about to happen it's impossible to say, but the number was large since many newspaper men were in confidence to look out for it.

Proof our system of voluntary censorship is the fact that not a word of this got out to the public. The grim reality that the Japs emphasized, however, in the hope that it won't happen under similar circumstances is that the Japanese knew a great deal more than most of us did.

Repeated Raids

The Domei radio they broadcast details of how the new 20th air force and the 20th bomber command were being built. They even told about construction of bases in China.

When the first of the new B-29s arrived in India they were held up a night or two later broadcast not only the number of planes—18—but also the serial numbers painted on the sides of the planes. They announced that the B-29s were being sent to a certain Chinese field in preparation for the bombing of Tokyo, and they threatened to destroy them on the ground.

Granted that security in China, with its teeming contentious millions, is difficult, yet it would seem that some barrier could be put up to diminish the flow of information in Japan. Astonishing instances can be cited.

When Major General Stratemeyer, with Supreme Commander Lord Louis Mountbatten, decided to move his headquarters from New Delhi to Calcutta, a great many men in the command did not know just when the move would be made. The Domei radio announced that Stratemeyer's headquarters would be moved to a particular building in Calcutta three days before the March 14. Given the muddled information policy in India, news of such movements often been heard first in Japanese broadcasts.

The first news to come in would indicate that the Japs had good and their advance information, were not able to lessen the force of the long-planned blow against their mainland. Conceivably they have no effective defence against this new battleship of the air.

But what a tragedy if they had been able to nullify the months and years of planning and struggle and work! As it was, they were apparently ready since only a few days a general emergency air-raid drill was ordered throughout Hiroshito's homeland.

The lesson from Japan state that frantic efforts are being pushed to conceal and decentralize industry. They know the time was approaching when the torrent of destruction that has fallen on Germany would rain on Japan which now has reported so much misery and suffering to the rest of the world.

What happened on Thursday is not like the Doolittle raid of two years ago, a brave stab in the dark to show we could do it—to give the Japanese people advance warning their war leaders had betrayed them. Thursday's raid is the beginning of a consistent, concentrated attack on the Japs at home.

At the same time, of course, here in Washington they warn us not to expect too much at the start. It will not be, immediately at any rate, a daily affair as it has been over Europe in recent months. Every new weapon develops difficulties needing correction and the B-29 is not likely to be an exception.

Although she has new armor, new speed, new altitude, new cruising range, new fire power, there will inevitably be losses. Our men will fall into the hands of the enemy.

Read a confidential report the other day that told some of the tortures inflicted by the Japs on captured American fliers. It doesn't seem to me I can bear myself to recite those horrors. But it might be well to remember, when we're beseeched to buy bonds and to contribute in other small ways here at home, what those men know they face each time they go on a mission.

From the day when it was just a gleam in General Arnold's eye, four years ago, the story of the B-29 is a wonderful story.

Coincident with the invasion of Europe, it is an earth-shaking demonstration of Allied might.

Dilemma of North Dakota

By J. H. GRAY

For Canadians watching the progress of the campaigns south of the border fully realize the importance which local issues have in turning election tides. The current Republican primary campaign in North Dakota is an apt example of how political feel issues can intrude to confuse what would otherwise be a clear-cut struggle between isolationism and internationalism.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, one of the leading isolationists, is seeking what is up for re-nomination for another six-year term in the U.S. Senate. Because of his pre-war record, he is faced with strong opposition inside his party and a vigorous drive is being made to prevent his renomination.

If this were the only issue in North Dakota, we in Canada could see some conclusions from the result. Unfortunately, however, another question is involved which has nothing to do with foreign policy but which may become the major issue of the campaign.

Under the United States Senate there operates a number of committees of great power. Regional and party considerations are the original factors in appointing members to these committees. Once on, however, seniority is what counts. The ranking members of a majority party in the Senate are always the chairmen of the committees.

Senator Nye is now rounding out 20 years in the U.S. upper house. He is the ranking Republican member of the most powerful of all the Senate committees—the appropriations committee.

For years the people of North Dakota have felt they have had less than their fair share of federal spending. As a habitually Republican state, its representatives did not wield much power when the Democratic party controlled both houses of Congress. But if the Republicans gain a majority at this election, a Republican will head each of the committees. If North Dakota Republicans renominate and later elect Senator Nye, he will be chairman of the appropriations committee. By reason of that position he will be one of the most powerful men in Washington.

Not only will he be able to do many things for North Dakota on his own book, but he can bring influence to bear upon other chairmen to get them to take a friendly interest in his state. But if Senator Nye is defeated, chairmanship of this committee will fall to the next senior man—a New Englander. Senator Nye's successor would wield little power in Washington until he had built up his seniority, as Senator Nye did by winning three elections.

Thus the dilemma posed for the North Dakota neighbors is thorny indeed. If they reject Senator Nye, they throw away a powerful voice for getting more federal money spent in North Dakota. If they vote for him they elect an extreme isolationist whose ideas about the need for a world order may be the complete opposite of their own. If they defeat Senator Nye it will of course be a repudiation of his isolationist ideas. But in that case it may or may not be an endorsation of his record on foreign policy. What the people in North Dakota, in this regard, will be true of other states as well.

"Get the butt of your rifle into the hollow of your shoulder!" cried the musketry instructor.

"I can't," said the recruit, "there's a bone there."

"Oh, is there? I suppose the rest of these blokes are filleted?"

Mr. Semi-Detach: "For goodness sake, Ethel, stop making that alarm clock go off! What's the idea, anyway?"

Mrs. Semi-Detach: "I only want to make the neighbors think we have a telephone.

SIDE GLANCES

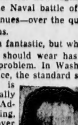

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—With the toughest battle of the war now raging in Normandy, the Naval battle of the Potomac continues—over the question of uniforms.

It may seem fantastic, but what a Naval officer should wear has become a real problem. In Washington, for instance, the standard summer uniform is grey, especially selected by Admiral Ernie King, who went over the head of the late Secretary of the Navy Knox to get the summer greys adopted.

Drew Pearson

But if an officer is flying to the West Coast, he finds that tan summer khakis are standard. Then if he moves on to Pearl Harbor, he finds that Admiral Nimitz has bowed to Admiral King and greys, not khakis, are what the well-dressed Naval officer should wear.

But when he goes on to Noumea, New Caledonia, headquarters of the South Pacific, khakis, not greys, are in vogue again. What is to be worn all depends on the Naval commander of each area.

Meanwhile, laundry bills, the baggage space and the extra shirts, cap covers and, in some cases, different buttons and insignia are enough to keep a young ensign in poverty, or drive his wife to distraction. Different colored shirts must be carried for each different type of uniform: Tan shirts for the khakis, grey shirts for the greys, white shirts for the blues.

Gold Braid

But the most irksome ruling pertains to the winter blues. It has been ordered that the dark navy blue uniform, used as the work uniform during the past months, shall have gold braid extending only two thirds of the distance around the sleeve at the cuff. But blue uniforms worn in the evening must have stripes running completely around the cuff. Result: Officers must carry at least two sets of blues—one for evening and one for work, very difficult when airplane baggage must be light.

Here are some other dos and don'ts which the well-dressed Naval officer must obey:

1—In Washington you can't wear aviation green uniforms except in arriving at the airport or in departing from the airport. Admiral King has thrown his weight with the battleship school and ruled that aviation green uniforms should not be too conspicuous.

2—Except for a few favored officers, no one may wear tan but he worn with the grey summer uniform. The chin strap on the cap must be tan, also black shoulder boards and buttons.

3—Whites are mandatory in the evening, together with the high stiff 1898 Spanish-American war collars—despite the frantic laundry problem.

4—You can still get away with wearing khaki uniforms in Washington, despite Admiral King's order for greys. He modified it when it was found that to make greys compulsory would have forced officers to discard 600,000 brown uniforms and use up so much cloth as to threaten civilian clothes rationing.

"Could we have our new insignia officially approved, Sir?"

Coldwell Says First "People's Govt." Elected

OTTAWA, June 22.—(CP)—M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said last night before a party victory rally that the "first people's government on this continent" had been elected last week by the C.C.F. victory in the Saskatchewan provincial election.

"In Saskatchewan we destroyed race and religious prejudice," he said. "The Tories won in the 1929 provincial election by raising the issue of religion; now they are at their lowest ebb."

C. P. McTague, national chairman of the Progressive Conservative party, was the "spokesman of a defeated party" when he suggested men in home defence forces be made available for overseas service; Mr. McTague had raised an issue his leader in the House of Commons had not dared to raise, Mr. Coldwell said.

GRAYDON LEADER

(Gordon Graydon, member of parliament for Peel, is the Progressive Conservative house leader.)

Those who demanded that manpower be regimented further should be required to see that industry and wealth were "laid on the altar" also, but that the Tories never will do," he added.

The federal government had failed to make adequate provision for the post-war period and in that failure lay the danger of revolutionary movements arising after the war. Canada should avoid conditions like those which developed in Russia in 1917 and which would appear in other countries in Europe and Asia after this war.

Joseph Burton, C.C.F. member of parliament for Humboldt, Sask., said a better Canada should be the memorial to those who died in the war, and A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, said the Saskatchewan election results had been the greatest shock of the century to "entrenched interests."

Company Charged On Defence Count For Advertisement

TORONTO, June 23—(CP)—Preliminary hearing of a charge against Margaret P. Austin and the Joy Oil Company with a breach of the Defence of Canada regulations in connection with a newspaper advertisement was set in police court yesterday for June 28.

The charge concerned publication of an advertisement by the company last may 30 under the heading: 'An appeal to the Rt. Hon. MacKenzie King to stop the 'gas' black market."

The charge, laid by Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was that the advertisers "did act in a manner, spread reports or make statements or utterances intended or likely to be prejudicial to the safety of the efficient prosecution of the war."

Give Details Of Allowances For Children

OTTAWA, June 22.—(CP)—Federal government proposals to give every Canadian child "a closer approach to equality of opportunity" were set forth yesterday in a resolution covering the payment of family allowances placed on the Commons order paper by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The resolution, which will be followed by a measure authorizing payments, disclosed for the first time the payments proposed.

They will range from $5 a month for a child less than six years old to $8 a month for a child of 13 or more but less than 16.

BENEFIT LIMITED

The benefit for large families will be limited. The rates in the various age groups will be reduced by $1 a month in respect of the fifth child; $2 in respect of the sixth and seventh and $3 in respect of the eighth and any additional child or children.

The allowances, effective as from July 1, 1945, will be paid in respect of "each child in Canada under 16 years of age," in accordance with the scale.

Officials said that the allowances will have their greatest benefit for families in the low income groups.

Under the Income War Tax Act a reduction in tax payable is granted a taxpayer for a child. When the allowances come into effect, the reduction granted for a child will be reduced by "an appropriate amount" based upon the family allowances payable under the measure.

TO BE WORKED OUT

This "appropriate amount" still has to be worked out in detail, and it was understood that a statement on the method to be used would be made by Finance Minister Ilsley later.

In cases where the taxpayer's income ranges from $6,000 upwards it is probable there will be little cash benefit from the allowances, it was learned. But in the smaller income groups the entire cash amount of the allowances will be received without affecting taxation.

Payment of the allowances was forecast in the Speech From The Throne read at opening of the 1944 session of parliament on Jan. 27.

BASIS FOR PROPOSAL

Basis for the proposal was set forth as follows:

"The family and the home are the foundations of national life. To aid in ensuring a minimum of well-being to the children of the nation and to help gain for them a closer approach to equality of opportunity in the battle of life you will be asked to approve a measure making provision for family allowances."

Reference to the proposal has been made in the Commons several times during the session, but without resolution or bill before the house there has been no discussion.

Labor organizations' spokesmen have said that children's allowances should not be used as a substitute for fair wages.

TORONTO, June 22—(CP)—In commenting on the Dominion government's plan to pay family allowances based upon the number of children in each Canadian family, John W. Buckley, vice-president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, yesterday said "aid to families with children is unnecessary if the wage-earners of the family make decent wages."

"All organized labor has flatly opposed grants which subsidize poverty and low wages and undermine incentive to self-improvement of living conditions," he said. "This looks like a subsidization of one province by the others, deduction from the pay envelopes of Ontario and the rest of Canada to maintain low standards and wages in Quebec.'

Triple Tie in Capturing Greased Pig; Bray and Calhoun Horse-Shoe Winners

Over 300 Take Part in I.T.S. Events

ALTHOUGH the pace is decidedly torrid in the American League that circuit can't lay claim to having a monopoly on tight pennant races, as a check of both International and Pacific Coast loop standings will readily show.

Hollywood was the only team in the first division to come through with a win yesterday, even the lowly Sacramento club rising up to smite the leading San Franciscans 12-1.

Portland had been on top in the coast loop for some time, relinquishing the premier position just a few days ago and since has been pushed down to fourth, Seattle has driven from well down in the second division to the runner-up spot, Sacramento, of course, has never been a very serious threat, but recently has been doing better and is just nine and a half games from the leaders.

Although the St. Louis Browns won again yesterday, there are only five and a half games separating them from Cleveland. Incidentally the Indians took their game from Detroit on Tuesday, but dropped from seventh because the Athletics picked off a pair.

Baltimore Orioles, current leaders in the international, have been there only a couple of days, with Buffalo and Rochester doing most of the chasing right now. Jersey City had been up, but the Little Giants are fifth today.

FOUR WINS IN SINGLE DAY

WHEN it comes to marathon performances, Cpl. J. G. Turner of Watrous, Sask., would appear to be entitled to more than a modest place in the spotlight. All Turner did yesterday was to pitch and win four successive games in helping his team take first place in the 16-club fastball tournament at No. 4 I.T.S. on Wednesday.

And by the way, one of the members of the winning aggregation was none other than AC2 Don Metz, former Toronto Maple Leaf hockey star. Don arrived just recently at I.T.S. to complete another course.

Red Deer Golf club is holding the annual two-day tournament for the Central Alberta championship on July 1 and 2. Entries should be addressed to D. W. Robertson, tournament chairman. Chas. Heath is president of the Red Deer club, a thriving organization with an up-to-date course.

Course 107 Champions In Fastball

OVER 300 airmen took part in the various athletic events staged at Varsity Stadium on Wednesday afternoon in connection with the commemoration of the third anniversary of the opening of No. 4 Initial Training School.

The 16-team fastball tournament, feature event of the day, was won by Course 107, who defeated Course 104 in the final by a score of 4-3, the winning run coming in the last inning.

There were 34 teams in horseshoe pitching, 24 competitors in baserunning, 20 in the fastball throw and 12 in fungo hitting.

A triple tie resulted in the greased pig event, LAC. D. M. Harding of Winnipeg, AC2 G. I. DePape of Swan Lake, Man. and LAC. Munson of Fort Saskatchewan, all finishing in a "dead heat" in the opinion of the judges.

AC2 Black and AC2 Archibald of Course 107, tied with LAC. Jenkins and LAC. Ashton of Course 103 in the commando event. Both pairs covered the quarter-mile obstacle or commando course in 1 minute, 30 seconds.

Flt. Sgt. Sellers was the eventual winner of the baserunning when he defeated Flying Officer McPherson and AC2 Cholak in a run-off, the three having finished in a tie.

The fastball throw was won by AC2 McDonald. Course 104, with AC2 Reich, Course 104 placing second.

First prize in fungo hitting went to Sgt. Lush, Headquarters, with AC2 Budsey, W.E.T.P. taking second.

The horseshoe pitching competition was won by Sgt. Bray and Sgt. Calhoun of Headquarters, who defeated LAC. Halliday and LAC. Dziadan of Course 104 in the final.

The officers' fastball squad was eliminated in the first round of the 16-team tournament, bowing out after and extra inning was played.

Following is the lineup of the winning team: AC. A. I. Richards, Calgary; AC. R. N. Thompson, Bassano; AC. J. W. Lacey, Vancouver; Cpl. W. A. Tyre, Vancouver; LAC. H. B. Tait, Winnipeg; LAC. G. Turner, Watrous, Sask. (pitcher); AC2 Don Metz, Toronto; AC2 W. B. Gourley, Ladysmith, B.C.; AC2 D. E. McKnight, Powell River, B.C.; Sgt. Wright, Govan, Sask.; LAC. J. R. Smith, Sarnia, Ont.

Sports . . . . Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, June 22.—(AP)—Ever hear of a school for baseball coaches, in which the small-college, prep and even sandlot tutors could learn a few trade secrets from the game's big-timers? . . . During the off season most big-time college football coaches appear at one or more such schools but as far as this dept. can learn, Alabama's Coaching School is the only one that includes baseball—and it is out for the duration. . . .

Shorts and shells:

The A.A.U. is seriously considering night track meets in case the championships remain in New York, because afternoon attendance has been so unsatisfactory. Fewer than 4,000 customers turned out last week-end . . . Gill Torres, Senators' third baseman, wears extra-long pants, like Al Simmons, for the same reason. What probably are the thinnest legs in major league baseball. . . . When Elmore Harris, the Morgan State College "unknown" turned on the heat in a time trial at the A.A.U. track meet, defending champion Cliff Bourland asked Wes Wallace, "Where the hell is he going?" . . . Cliff found out when he sat on the sidelines and watched Harris win the title.

Service dept.:

Cpl. Billy Conn has been transferred to an "undisclosed station" after a short stay at the Greensboro, N.C., overseas replacement depot. . . . Wonder if that means he'll give the G.I.'s overseas his description of past and future tussles with Joe Louis?

Sweet Seventeens Replacing "Them Bums" in Brooklyn

BROOKLYN, June 22.—(AP)—The youth movement has hit the Dodgers and in place of the fair and 40 players they sought last winter, "them bums" are loading their roster with sweet seventeens.

Within the past few weeks Branch Rickey, who was largely responsible for the old-but-safe trend, has cut loose 42-year-old Johnny Allen and Gil English, Lloyd Waner, Fritz Ostermueller and the veteran "rookies", Pat Ankenmann and Gil English.

In addition manager Leo Durocher has removed himself from the active list and Arky Vaughan's name has been added to those who have voluntarily retired.

In their places are Eddie Miksis, Charles Osgood, Ralph Branca, Calvin McLish and Clyde King, whose ages range from 17 to 19; Eddie Basinski, 22 and a recent graduate from the University of Buffalo, and Jack Bolling, 27, just brought back from Montreal. The 17-year-olds, Miksis, a shortstop, and Osgood, a pitcher, are just out of high school in Barrington, N.J., and Somerville, Mass., respectively.

McLish, who just reached 18 and is headed for the navy, already has won a berth as a starting pitcher and Branca, another 18-year-old has seen considerable mound service since he finished his freshman season at New York University. Durocher retired Tuesday to make room for King, 19-year-old flinger from the University of North Carolina.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Promoter Mike Jacobs will take the wrappers off his new "Georgia Peach" at Madison Square Garden Friday night when he tosses young Ike Williams into the ring against veteran Cleo Shans.

Jacobs' previous "Georgia Peach" was Beau Jack—the battle royal belter from Augusta, Ga., who drew gates totaling more than $1,000,000 for 13 main events at the Garden.

Beau Jack is in service now; likewise Bob Montgomery, who is recognized as lightweight champion in New York State, which leaves 20-year-old Williams, who now lives at Trenton, N.J., as the outstanding civilian lightweight. Of course such recognition excludes Juan Zurita of Mexico, who is recognized as lightweight champ by the National Boxing Association, and who recently accidently shot himself in the hand after losing a New York bout to Beau Jack.

LOOKS LIKE CROWD PLEASER

ZURITA'S defensive showing against Beau Jack indicated that he was a dangerous contender; but not a crowd pleaser. Williams —beautiful boxer and terrific puncher—apparently is a crowd pleaser, although his style is much more civilized than that of Beau Jack, the super club fighter. He has captivated the fans in other cities, such as Philadelphia, where he and Bob Montgomery drew the second largest indoor crowd in the history of that city—second only to Joe Louis and Gus Dorazio.

If Williams can give tough Shans a thorough licking at the Garden Friday night—and particularly if he can knock him out—he will capture a New York following that will make him key man in the lower divisions. Ike, who was born at Brunswick, Ga., and who moved to Trenton, N.J., in 1932, then will become Uncle Mike's new "Georgia Peach".

New York fans have read about Isiah Williams—about his unusual winning record; but they remember particularly the stories of how he was knocked out in the 12th and last round by Bob Montgomery at Philadelphia early this year. Montgomery's final blow knocked him through the ropes and draped him over the ring apron and across the bell as if semi-dead.

HAD WON 33 IN ROW

NEITHER Williams nor his manager, Conn McCarthy, offered any alibis for that defeat. McCarthy merely said: "I overmatched the kid. I put him in at 136 pounds against a veteran who weighed 137; but I thought he could take him. It was my fault."

Williams' defeat by Montgomery snapped a string of 33 straight victories. Instead of killing young Williams' ambitions, this terrific beating spurred him on—made him develop a grand left hook, for one thing, and sharpen his boxing in all departments. He surged back, knocking out Ellis Phillips; Joey Peralta, Mike Delia, Leroy Saunders; and outpointed Leo Francis, slugger White and Sammy Angott.

His close victory over Angott, former lightweight champion, attracted Mike Jacobs' attention. It earned Williams' his first main event at Madison Square Garden, where Jacobs offers him the new "Georgia Peach," hopeful that brown skinned Shans will not blight his bloom.

Tight Race For League Pennant In International

By BOB NIELSEN

TORONTO, June 22—(CP)—With a little more than one-third of the season over in the International Baseball League, it's still anybody's pennant.

Only six games separate the leading Baltimore Orioles and the sixth-place Toronto Maple Leafs, and the Orioles don't figure to stay on top any more than the Leafs. 1943 flag winners, figure to retain their current low status.

SCRAMBLED RACE

The scrambled race saw seven positions change hands in the last week, with Baltimore holding first, Buffalo and Rochester moved up a notch each to second and third, Montreal broke a fifth-place tie with Toronto to take over fourth, and Newark vacated the cellar in favor of Syracuse. Jersey City plunged from second fo fifth and Toronto slipped back to sixth.

With signs pointing to a close battle right into September, the well-balanced Buffalo Bisons are rated the team to beat. Rochester Red Wings, favored in pre-season forecasts, were hard hit by the drafting of brilliant shortstop Al Schoendienst and are struggling to stay in the first division.

LEAF PITCHING ILLS

Both Canadian clubs in the circuit, Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Royals, are flirting with the .500 won-lost percentage. Pre-season paper strength of the Leaf pitching failed to materialize, and Manager Burleigh Grimes has been further harrassed by feeble hitting and erratic fielding. Royals have a pitching meal ticket in veteran southpaw Tom Sunkel, ex-Giant and Cardinal, and a hard-hitting outfielder in Red Durrett.

The hustling Jersey City Giants, with a team average of 21 years and most of the regulars in their 'teens, are a huge improvement over last years cellar-dweller. Newark Bears, once-powerful Yankee farmhands, are no longer a threat, but have rallied and are still driving.

The winner weighed 142. Three pounds less than Latsios. Latsios spent most of the time retreating before Henry.

Yanks Win 4-3 At Fairbanks In 10 Innings

By JACK SULLIVAN

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, June 21,—(CP) — (Delayed) — In one of the closest duels of 36 years in the Midnight Sun baseball classic, held annually at Fairbanks June 21, the Edmonton Yanks came through with a 10th inning 4-3 decision over the Ladd Field team of Fairbanks before a crowd of 2,000.

The game started in daylight shortly after midnight, and the sun was shining brightly when the game ended 2½ hours later. The first game was held in 1906, and has been played annually since then.

Behind 1-0 going into the final inning the Edmonton United States Air Forces GI Club scored three runs on two walks, a double by Third Baseman Columbus Birchfield, and a bag-clearing triple by Fielder Manuel Dorsky.

BREAK DEADLOCK

Lon battles doubled scoring two to put Ladd Field in the game in the final half of the 9th and Birchfield came through again in the 10th to break the deadlock with a scorching single to right field scoring Catcher Al Goordich who walked and advanced to second on Pitcher Johnny Gray's single.

Neil Webster who relieved southpaw Bob Brooks on the Ladd Field mound in the 10th was the losing pitcher. Brooks allowed the Yanks only four hits against Gray's eight.

At one time, he says, it was said there wasn't room at the lakehead for as many as four golf courses, yet all are booming now.

Bluffer tried to bluff his way through at Dufferin Park in Toronto the other day, but it didn't work. . . Bluffer is a five-year-old and has never won a race. . . . He finally came home fastest, but the stewards disqualified him for roughing. So, Bluffer is still a maiden. . . . If he comes along, he will be the big city's first good big fellow since Jack Renault. He has his discharge from the army too.

CANADIAN SPORTSHOTS

By SYD THOMAS

TORONTO, June 22.—(CP)— This one is told about Tom Sunkel Montreal Royals' purposeful mound star. With the invasion going on and everyone much interested in events on the beachhead, his teammates got to talking about the war and this and that.

"What do you think of the international situation," queried Larry O'Brien, batting practice pitcher for Royals, as well as sports writer for the Montreal Standard.

"Well," replied Sunkel reflectively, double-shifting a cud of tobacco in the approved fashion for these anecdotes. "There's nothing wrong with the International that a little better pitching won't cure."

'Ware squalls:

Mother Nature pulled a little sabotage on yachtsmen in a race up Sarnia way the other day. The boats were beating along right merrily with a spanking breeze when a sudden squall whipped up. The storm held the water back from the end of the lake the boats were sailing in, and the lake level dropped four feet in an hour. As a result only two of the yachts with shallow keels were able to finish the race, while the others fumed and snapped their halyards.

Bit discouraging:

We wouldn't blame some pitchers if they got a little downhearted. Frankie Germann hurled a one-hitter in a girls' fastball game against Moose Jaw Royals, but lost out 2-0. And then in an interclounty game between Kitchener and Preston, Ont., Maynord Knorr kept Preston form collecting a solitary safety, but lost 4-0 as his mates errored and kicked the gong around. It just ain't no use!

Thursday topics:

Royal Copeland, brilliant young football star who came directly from high school to become the mainstay of the Toronto navy squad last fall, has been transferred from H.M.C.S.

Air Power

Our Job in the Pacific

By Maj. A. P. de Seversky

Henry A. Wallace, vice-president of the United States, is one of our national leaders who is keenly aware of how modern aviation is reshaping political, economic and military relationships in the world. He gives new proof of this in an essay on "Our Job in the Pacific," just published as a pamphlet by the Institute of Pacific Relations.

Throughout this work, the vice-president reveals his sense of the extent to which the airplane is changing things for the nations and peoples fringing the Pacific ocean. I am not passing judgment on his deductions, but the fact itself that he does not, like so many others, ignore the far-reaching effects of the aviation age, is noteworthy.

de Seversky

"The rise of aviation," he writes at one point, "will create new problems both economic and strategic and may possibly become a serious source of international friction; but on the other hand it may also serve as one of the integrating factors between economic regions and political groupings."

He points out that "Polar air routes and Arctic economic development may make the North Pacific a great post-war communications highway between America, Russia and the Far East". Under a map of the ocean area in the vice president's pamphlet there is a caption which sums up the essence of the aviation age. It reads:

"The shrinking Pacific—steamships measured Pacific distances in weeks. Airplanes measure them in hours, drawing the Americas, Asia and Australia ever closer together."

STRATEGIC MAP

In touching on the strategic picture in the Pacific, however, Mr. Wallace shows that he has not revised the orthodox concepts in line with the new aviation realities. It is clear that he still follows assumptions carried over from the epoch when sea power fixed the military pattern. While recognizing that distances must be measured "in hours", he fails to apply the logic of that fact to his vision of the strategic map of the future.

Like so many statesmen and political leaders, Mr. Wallace is unable to recognize the technological future in terms of an understanding of the essentials of aeronautical science. I believe we have entered a period in history when great vision and insight in the political sphere will not be enough —these must be backed by technological vision and insight to have any reality.

The vice president foresees a victory in the Pacific in this war which will leave American and United Nations forces in occupation of innumerable islands strewn across the Western Pacific like a Milky Way." These he believes "will secure us against any Pearl Harbor surprise attack in the future."

If he is thinking of them as possible observation points (similar to the radio-equipped sloops which the Japs strew across the Pacific), he may be right. But if he is thinking of these scattered islands as air bases of strategic value, he is on the wrong track. Since they cannot contain enough air power to match what an enemy can bring against them from a primary base; they are doomed to be snuffed out as soon as the enemy consider it worth the investment and the effort.

CONTROL OF SKIES

Such small islands automatically belong to the one who dominates the surrounding ocean, and that in turn belongs to the one who controls the skies above the ocean. Control of the air is the telling element, will not be determined by possession of pinpoint islands or aircraft carriers. It will be determined by land-based air power, operating from the home land; that is, from the source of a nation's industrial might.

Because the range of aircraft is limited as yet—through no fault of aeronautical engineering—and because we have built a mighty naval air arm, we now control the waters of the Pacific. The small islands are falling to our side one after the other. They can contain so little aviation that we smother them readily with shipborne aircraft. Once the development of planes reaches the point where they can strike through the entire length and breadth of the ocean from primary bases in the home land, such intermediary stations will be useless to both sides.

Under the caption: "Our Strategic Needs," Vice President Wallace writes:

NAVAL AIR BASES

"It is probably safe to assume that the thought uppermost in the minds of our navy after the war will concern the importance of securing naval and air bases which will insure our strategic control of the Pacific. Such bases will in all likelihood be situated on small islands like the Japanese mandates."

There we have a perfect example of routine acceptance of old ideas for the new period. Mr. Wallace has forgotten that powerful naval bases like Hong Kong, Corregidor and Singapore were helpless against an enemy who had superiority in the skies. How, therefore, will a naval station on some small mandate island survive when it is within a few hours' flight of the entire enemy aviation planted on a great land mass, when the enemy, moreover, will be able to deposit scores of thousands of tons of bombs, or do in one flight what it takes the British and American air forces combined to do today to Germany in one month?

The base can survive only if shielded by superior friendly air power. But air power of such magnitude can only be husbanded on the mainland. To count on the tiny Pacific islands as a network of security is to deal in memories, not facts.

Protest New Control

Air Dictatorship Under Howe Charged in House by Tories

By JAMES McCOOK

OTTAWA, June 22.—(CP)—Progressive Conservative opposition members said yesterday in the Commons that a bill establishing an air transport board gives Munitions Minister Howe undue power over civil aviation in Canada.

Howard Green (PC—Vancouver South) said that appeals from board rulings would go to Mr. Howe and thus make a cabinet minister "dictator of civil aviation."

Mr. Howe replied that the only alternative to ministerial responsibility was a bureaucracy, which had been condemned by the opposition. The proposed board would have more administrative control over aviation than any previous board. Under the provisions of the bill, air transport would not be bound by the rules of surface transport.

GIVE BOARD CONTROL

The bill before the house, which amends the aeronautics act, would remove control of civil aviation from the hands of transport commissioners and place it under the new board.

Mr. Green said the bill contained a principle which was "dead wrong" in that it provided for the cancellation of air transport licenses a year after the war.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, said that a list of applications to operate air routes indicated "that this country is being sewn up now if the government permits, by the Canadian Pacific air lines, and the battle in parliament today is a battle between those of us who believe that the most efficient services can be run by the nation and those who want the Canadian Pacific to get in on the ground floor."

ASKS WITHDRAWAL

Mr. Green said an inference had been made that he spoke for the Canadian Pacific, which was untrue. There should be a withdrawal.

Mr. Coldwell said he had made no reference to Mr. Green. Deputy Speaker Joseph Bradette, chairman of the house committee, said he did not think any point or order or question of privilege arose.

Mr. Green said he appealed the chairman's ruling, but Mr. Coldwell said that rather than delay proceedings he would withdraw any implication that Mr. Green felt he had made.

J. G. Diefenbaker, (PC-Lake Centre) said he would later move an amendment which would allow the proposed board to exercise its powers without being "hobbled by the prejudices of the minister."

PLANS AMENDMENT

He proposed to move an amendment deleting from the bill the provision that the board grant licenses to operate air lines only subject to approval of the minister. The minister's approval should not be required. The board should protect the Canadian people against air transport monopoly but also allow development by either private or government services. He would not favor granting Mr. Howe the power he sought under the bill.

If the bill passed as it stood it would carry into the peace era the powers conferred on the federal cabinet under the War Measures Act.

ST. BONIFACE, Man., June 22.—(CP)—Colorful ceremonies yesterday marked a celebration commemorating the 100th anniversary of the arrival in the Red River colony of the first four Grey Nuns, Sisters of Charity.

The ceremonies opened in St. Boniface cathedral with pontifical high mass, close to the graves of the four, Sister Lafrance, Sister Lagrave, Sister Coutlee and Sister Laprance, who came from Montreal, June 21, 1844.

Archbishop Gerald Murray of Winnipeg told the congregation of the work of "four brave women who came into an unknown land."

Later, a reception was held at the Provincial House over which flew the yellow papal flag, the blue flag of the Sacred Heart and the Union Jack.

In attendance were Sr. Evangeline Galiant, mother-general of the mother house, Montreal, and her assistant, Sr. Virginie Allaire, and Sr. Margaret Mann of Edmonton, and Sr. Leona Breux, Cambridge, Mass.

Crowd Threatens Union Members

VALLEYFIELD, Que., June 22.—(CP)—Valleyfield police last night prevented a fight between 125 members of the international union of textile workers and a crowd—estimated at more than 500—when the crowd started hurling bricks and stones through the windows of the union local's meeting place.

The union members were holding a meeting in a room in the city hall when the crowd started hurling the missiles. Kent Rowley, chairman of the meeting, suggested the members attempt to halt the crowd but before they could leave the city hall, police had barricaded both doorways.

Police allowed the union members to return to their homes in small groups but no trouble ensued.

Police said they could not identify the persons who attacked the union headquarters and added that no one was arrested.

Private Radio Network Urged

OTTAWA, June 22—(CP)—Joseph Sedgewick, K.C., counsel for the Canadian Association of Broadcasters, said here yesterday a mutual network of private stations competing with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation would make for better broadcasting in Canada.

Appearing before the Commons' radio committee to answer questions on a brief he had presented to the committee in March, Mr. Sedgewick said he visualized a mutual network competing with the CBC to the mutual advantage of all concerned.

Mr. Sedgewick said he would like to see a setup which would be similar to that of Canadian National Railways with the privately-owned Canadian Pacific competing with the publicly-owned Canadian National and, all controlled by an impartial judicial body. He said the present setup, if applied to railways, would see the Canadian National regulating the Canadian Pacific and he thought this would be unfair.

Member Intrepid Edmonton City Squadron Tells of Air Combats

Returns to City

Sqdn.-Ldr. J. C. Hackney, who has been appointed commanding officer of No. 3 Recruiting Centre, R.C.A.F., here. He succeeds Sqdn.-Ldr. John Pugh, M.B.E., M.C., whose retirement was announced last week. Sqdn.-Ldr. Hackney was commanding officer of the centre here for eight months during 1943 and 1944, and has recently been chief of the sub-depot at Calgary. He will take over his duties Saturday.

Another of the intrepid fliers of the famed City of Edmonton squadron, FO. Herbert Jones, arrived in the city this week. "Jonesie" to his friends, he has a score of three enemy planes destroyed in the air to his credit.

He made 60 operational trips with the squadron without ever being hit by flak or return fire. The first plane he got was "nothing spectacular", he said.

"The second one though exploded in the air right in front of me and for a minute I was a little worried about the debris, and the third one sure took a lot of ammunition. It was a Junkers 290, a four engined transport job that the Jerries were using as a night fighter—but it finally went down."

FO. Jones lived in Edmonton for a number of years and is married to an Edmonton girl. His father is Inspector J. Tapson Jones, R.C.M.P., who was stationed here from 1932 to 1935 and again in 1939 and 1940.

"Jonesie" said he is looking forward to a get-together with FO. Johnny Caine, D.F.C., who arrived home Wednesday. The two men flew together on the squadron and travelled home on the same ship.

He said the men of the squadron feel pretty good about being adopted by Edmonton and that they would certainly appreciate what is being done by citizens who are contributing to the $15,000 fund for the purpose of providing special comforts for the squadron.

"Sports equipment is pretty scarce over there and I know the boys would certainly be glad to get anything along that line. There's a gymnasium at the station but it's pretty bare," he said.

FO. Jones enlisted in the R.C.A.F. at Edmonton in October, 1940, and trained in Vancouver and Calgary. He instructed at Yorkton, Sask. until he went overseas early in 1943. His posting to the Edmonton squadron came through in November of last year.

Accompanied by his wife, the former Miss Moira Law, the officer arrived in the city early this week and is visiting his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Law. Wednesday of next week they will leave for Salmon Arm, B.C., to stay with his parents for the remainder of his 30-day leave.

Return Here After Making Two Films

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Finnie, employees of the public relations branch, Northwest Service Command, U.S. Army, have returned here from duty in Eastern United States, where they worked with the Signal Corps motion picture laboratories at Astoria, New York, and the office of Lt.-Gen. Brehon Somervell in the production of motion pictures of the Northwest.

Two films were produced. "Canol" is a five-reel picture and runs for about 55 minutes. "Alaska Highway" consists of four reels, time 37 minutes. These two pictures depict in colored films the complete story of the construction of these two big projects. Mr. Finnie not only took the photographs but wrote the script for the sound track. The two moving pictures are still being processed and will not be ready for public inspection for some time.

Mr. Finnie is the author of two well-known books about the Canadian Northwest, "Canada Moves North," and "The Lure of the North."

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

The government proposes to set up a veterans' affairs department to handle all matters concerning ex-service personnel. Do you think this a wise plan?

THE ANSWERS

L. JOHNSON, veteran: I think this is one of the best plans put forward by the government. There will be many boys coming back from overseas that won't fit in any particular place and I think this department will be able to look after them and place them suitably. I have seven sons in the armed forces and I am glad to know they will have an organization like this to go to if needs be when they come back.

FRANK COHN, paper salesman: I think it would be a good idea because it will be staffed by veterans who know the problems that service personnel have to face. They should be able to do more than any other organization because they have the understanding.

* * *

SGT. V. THOM, R.C.A.S.C.: I don't know just what kind of "affairs" this department would handle. The Canadian Legion helps servicemen now. I suppose this is a plan to help all ex-service personnel, and has to be undertaken by a body ready to handle a larger unit. I think, whatever the work done, this is a good idea.

Police Searching For Obliging Man

City police on Thursday were looking for an unidentified man who reportedly offered to get a cheque cashed for Izra J. Muma, 12010 127 street, and who failed to return with the money. The cheque was later found in a cafe, where it had been cashed.

Mr. Muma, an employee of the C.N.R. roundhouse at Calder, told police that he had tendered the cheque for $66.32 in payment for a drink Wednesday morning, but the cashier did not have sufficient change.

It was at this point a stranger offered to take the cheque to a nearby store to be cashed. A few minutes later, the latter returned, saying the store was closed, but that he would go to another shop. He failed to return after he left the second time.

Japanese Army Must Be Beaten On All Fronts

The Japanese army must be defeated in all war zones before final victory can be achieved in the Pacific, in the opinion of Prof. William C. Johnstone, M.A., Ph.D., professor of political science, George Washington University, Washington, D.C., who arrived in Edmonton Thursday in the course of a tour of Canada in which he is addressing meetings of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs.

His subject at the meeting of the Edmonton branch will be "The Basis for Peace in the Far East." The meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Edmonton club.

He was of the opinion that the conflict in the Pacific theatre of war would be a long one as the Japanese armies, wherever they are located must be beaten. This must be accomplished irrespective of what fate is in store for the Japanese homeland.

All territories now held by the Japanese invaders must be wrested from them and must be restored. He was of the opinion that a frank statement of intention regarding these territories by the United Nations would win wholehearted support from their inhabitants.

MUST WORK TOGETHER

He said that China and Russia must work in complete collaboration in solution of the world peace as it affects the Pacific areas. This is vital to world peace, he said.

He expressed confidence that if Russia and China can meet on common ground the United States and other Allied countries would be able to formulate solutions that would insure world peace. These nations would have to agree by common action on the Far East problems.

He said that the Japanese, if they were willing to work hard at it, can provide for themselves within their own islands by changing their economy to solve the Japanese problem and to extend the production of consumer goods.

HAVE ADVANTAGE

"They will have a decided advantage in this work," Professor Johnstone stated, "as they will not have to meet the very heavy costs of armaments in the immediate post-war period or for many years thereafter."

Professor Johnstone is a member of the Institute of Pacific Relations, and the Society of International Law. His writings include "The Shanghai Problem, 1937," and "The United States and Japan's New Order, 1941."

Find Two Youths Hiding in School

Two 14-year-old boys, found hiding in a closet on the top floor of Eastwood school, early Thursday morning, were taken in hand by city police.

Officers went to the school, after receiving information that someone was in the building, and were let in by F. W. Johnson, 11912 77 street, school janitor. The latter's keys, which had been left in a desk in the boiler room, were missing, and later were found in the possession of one of the youths.

The boys, saying they had entered the school to play, admitted gaining entrance by means of a window leading to the washroom on the boys' wing of the building. Going to the boiler room, they obtained the janitor's keys. They did not have time to use them, however, for police arrived on the scene, and they ran to the upper floor, where they were located.

Court Issues Four Possession Writs

Four writs for possession of dwellings were issued in supreme court chambers Thursday by Mr. Justice C. C. McLaurin with Aug. 1 set as the deadline in three of the cases, and July 7 in one case.

In one case the tenant beat the landlord to the draw, and informed the court that there was no need to proceed with the application for possession as the key to the accommodation had been turned into the landlord on Wednesday morning.

Counsel for the landlord did not quite see this and asked for a possession order with costs. The court refused the possession order but fixed the costs at $15 to include all disbursements. Mr. Justice McLaurin told the tenant that the $15 figure would be considerably below the amount if the bill of costs was taxed in the usual way.

Arbitrary costs were fixed in all cases ranging from a high of $20 to a low of $10. In all cases the costs include disbursements.

Each application for possession of city property was opposed by tenants, but Mr. Justice McLaurin held that all legal formalities had been met by landlords and that considerable consideration had been given the tenants. In all cases the landlords stated they desired the accommodation for themselves. Several of them intimated that they also faced eviction.

City of Edmonton Squadron Fund Needs Boost to Reach Objective

Committees officials of the City of Edmonton Squadron fund announced Thursday that they are hopeful of having FO. Johnny Caine, D.F.C., leading scorer of the squadron as special guest at the band concert Thursday night.

The concert will be given by the band of No. 3 "M" Depot at 101 street and Jasper avenue. Purpose of the concert is to give a boost to contributions to the fund. The band played a half hour concert at the same place at noon on Thursday.

At noon Friday the fund had passed the $9,000 mark and small donations were gaining momentum.

"If everyone digs down and contributes what he can we should go over the $15,000 objective in the next three days," an official said.

The fund was swelled considerably Thursday by several donations of $100 each, from the following firms: Capitol Theatre, Taylor and Pearson Ltd., King Edward Hotel; United Grain Growers; Blowey, Henry Ltd.; Aircraft Repair Ltd.; McGavin Ltd., and the Selkirk Hotel.

DOROTHY DIX SAYS—

Girls Must Have Purpose and Goal

Day of Incompetent Woman Past; Real Aim in Life Alone Will Bring Success; Wisdom, Intelligence Necessary Now

Girls, have you a date with life? Most of you have not. Not one out of a hundred of you has any set purpose in life. Beyond a vague, romantic dream that some day you will have a swell wedding and that you will make a lovely bride in white satin and orange blossoms, and live in a state of ecstatic bliss ever after, you have taken no thought of the future.

If you were going to have a date with Tom, Dick or Harry, you would spend a lot of time and energy in getting ready for it. You would put a fresh wave in your hair and manicure your nails. You would dress out your dress so it would look spick and span. You would think up some subject in which the boy was interested to talk about, and you would scheme how you would inveigle him into taking you to some swanky place to dance, or to a popular movie.

But when it comes to making a date with life, you don't even give it a moment's consideration. You leave everything to chance. You don't bother to plan out what you are going to do in the world. You don't even know what you want to do. If you teen-agers had a theme song, it would be: "Where do we go from here?" And the answer would be: "We haven't the slightest idea."

GIRLS DRIFT

It is because girls so seldom have an objective in life to which they are straining to attain that so many of them are failures. Most of them don't even choose their occupation when they have to go to work. They drift haphazardly into the first job that comes handy, without taking the trouble to find out if they have any talent for it, or if it is something that they will be interested in doing. Still less do they think it necessary to prepare themselves for it, because they do not expect to do it long. Only until they marry.

Undoubtedly every girl in the world hopes to get married, and none of them is so dumb that she does not know that her own happiness and that of her husband and the children she brings into the world depends upon her making a success of her marriage, but she has formulated no plans for doing this. She is leaving it all to Lady Luck. She marries without knowing how to cook, or to run a budget, or how to get along with her husband, or to bring up children, and her marriage ends in failure.

What I am trying to tell you, girls, is that the day of the incompetent woman, who got away with murder just because she was a woman, is over. And this goes for everything from a career to marriage. In the world that you will have to live in you can't just be drifters. You have got to be women with a purpose, who know where you are going, and which road to take, and all the short cuts to success. Many of you will not be able to marry. Many of you who do marry will have husbands who have to be helped to support the family. Get ready for it. Plan for it. Have your blue print for your campaign ready.

Make a date with life. And keep it.

In a circular scheme around a white punch bowl arrange, first, white cups, then cake squares on blue or red plates. Rosettes, made by placing a blue or red candle in a red gumdrop and surrounding each with 5 white mints are then arranged around the plates. Cross little flags or orange about table. Blue bachelor buttons or other blue flowers should be used.

GRENADINE PUNCH

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

SYMPATHY AND HEALTH

Some readers, who probably do not read the printed instructions to correspondents, seem to think that they are entitled to an answer, whether they comply with the instructions or not.

"I asked you if you know anything about the Pancreas, and all I received in reply was this printed form whereby you try to sidestep the question. Do you know any treatment for the Pancreas? If you don't, why can't you come out and say so honestly?"

So reacts one correspondent. The printed form I sent the correspondent explains that it is not practicable to give advice without having examined the patient . . . and that I must confine myself to my proper province, which is health and hygiene, not disease diagnosis or treatment. If this correspondent is entitled to a personal explanation why I can't give the information, advice or opinion he seeks, then many other correspondents who ask for diagnosis, treatment or opinion about their individual cases should have a personal letter from me—and when you have written that many personal letters in a day you are in no condition to give earnest or sympathetic attention to the cases or requests of many other correspondents who comply with the instructions and abide by the rules.

Believe it or not, for all my hard-boiled antics, and my sarcastic cracks, literally I still more Irish in me than a doctor should have—and I mean sympathy.

In a little magazine called "Courage", published for the Fraternity of the Wooden Leg, a member of the fraternity who is wearing two artificial legs offers some excellent practical suggestions for the benefit of others similarly handicapped. He expresses the feeling of a great many persons who have suffered serious loss, in peace or in war, thus:

"Varied reactions follow the amputation of a limb, contributed to by well meaning families and friends. One good courtesy to be offered a handicapped individual is, just be as natural with them as possible, the patient realizes more than the sympathizer, and definitely, sympathy is the last thing in the world a handicapped person should be offered. To familiarize these well-meaning families and friends is the object of my writing . . ."

Greet the boy who returns from the war maimed or disfigured with a welcome home and put your heart in it, but not one word about the wound or the loss he has suffered, unless he himself insists on talking about it. Better, as soon as you have told him how glad you are to see him, begin at once to tell him what goes, bring him up to date on the news about old friends. The sympathy that does the most good is not verbal.

Though human beings have been the animals at many of their games, the art of diving still is in the hands of the animals. Otters never splash—and they are the world's best divers for all others, including men make splashes.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

C.W.A.C. Hair Styles Problem

Hair—and how to dress it—used to be a problem in the early days of the Canadian Women's Army Corps. Some girls went to various local salons, some dressed their own hair, others had their barrack chums style it for them. Invariably the "finished product" didn't conform with army regulations.

Among the rules set down regarding hair styles in the C.W.A.C. there is one which was the biggest problem of all—hair ornaments to be regimental and soldierly. The rule is: "Hair will be worn two inches above the tunic collar". With this proviso came the mental queries: "Is it too long? Will it stay up? Is it too short?"

Since the advent of the C.W.A.C. beauty shops as official army establishments, however, these trials and tribulations have become a thing of the past. The soldier-girl in charge of Milady in Khika's tonsorial style knows exactly what is required by C.W.A.C. authorities and she sets the styles accordingly. It's a tricky business, too, for these young soldiers in serge are still feminine in spite of their military bearing. So the hairdresser's problem is how best to create hair styles to conform with regulations and, at the same time, work in that touch of glamour.

Some of the answers have been found in braids, rolls and even up-sweeps. The feather bob has long been recognized as the "C.W.A.C.'s favorite". Bovish bobs are discouraged as much as possible. The bob is considered as not being feminine and it is the desire of the officers in various units to keep their girls natural and feminine. Many Canadian miss can be seen sporting a hair-do which features a group of little curls resting on the forehead. Also the miss in Khaki is allowed to wear this style but she finds it impracticable, the reason being that when she dons her low-crowned hat the curls flatten out and become unsightly. Subsequently, flat rolls have taken the place of the forehead-curl style.

The halo roll has become popular with the army girls. It is regimental and glamorous at the same time. Also, it provides one with a sense of being correct, and at peace with army regulations.

As time goes by the young sisters in khaki are learning the art of being fashionably correct and girlishly attractive.

It's a neat trick—and they're working on it.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

There is a definite stage of childhood which is punctuated by constant crying. This begins as early as the 18th month and may last up to the third or fourth year. Let me add hastily, this does not mean nothing but crying, but it does mean that the child when disciplined, irritated, angered, resentful or hurt, resorts to tears. To the parent, no doubt, they do seem to be perpetual ones.

Naturally this behavior has an unhappy influence on the paren and what she does inspires the child to more tears so that we have that dizzy, well-named "vicious" circle. The mother aims to be kind and understanding but her nerves give way under the pressure of whining and crying and exentually she attacks her with full vigor, giving him, as she heatedly explains, something to cry about.

Let us imagine ourselves living in a world of giants who are attempting, in every situation, to force us to conduct which is pleasing to them. Every child has graduated from infancy, is, despite his own desires, washed, dressed, fed, put to bed, taken for walks, made to be nice to adults, deprived of playthings he wants, or playmates he cherishes.

Not only the giants about him but the whole world is leagued against him. His playthings refuse to do his bidding. The wagon won't gets stuck behind a chair, the blocks collapse, the cat scratches. His companions are all domineering or cold and submissive, at others biting, hitting enemies. In fact everything he encounters is bigger, stronger and more demanding than he can be himself.

It is the sensitive child, who feels deeply the nijustices he suffers and realizes he is helpless to do anything about them, who dissolves into tears. The more he cries the more fixed becomes this particular emotional response.

Parents should be more sensitive to the world as it seems to a child. Save him as many as possible of these frustrations and disappointments and encourage him to act upon his own initiative and desire.

Meanwhile, the parent must be busy explaining why certain things must be done, not to browbeat the child, but because these are social customs he must learn. His relations with other children should be explained. In fact, more punishment, more humiliation cannot possibly aid him in developing new and better ways of attacking his individual problems. He'll stop crying when he has learned its futility for himself.

Our new leaflet, "Techniques for Aiding Bad Habits," may be had by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Points for Parents

By EDYTH THOMAS WALLACE

Mother: "My knitting can wait until you go to bed because I'd rather do something with you. What would you like to do, Son?"

Mother: "I wish you'd tell me how you make your children mind. I've tried everything from whipping to taking Dick's allowance away from him."

Some parents do not need techniques for managing as much as they do opportunities for developing friendly parent-child relationships.

R.C.A.F. GIRLS SET THE STYLE

The smart hats and uniforms of Canada's Air Women are being copied by Britain's stylists and milliners are featuring hats for civilians that are practically identical. An English girl is shown discussing with a Canadian W.D. officer the similarity of the R.C.A.F. model and one of the most popular styles worn in Great Britain this summer. The civilian version comes in various colors but the shape is exactly like the Canadian Air Force service hat.

For Communities

$10,000,000 Appropriation Asked for Cultural Centres

OTTAWA, June 22.—(CP)—Appropriation of $10,000,000 by the Dominion government for assistance in establishing community cultural and art centres was urged before the Commons Reconstruction Committee yesterday.

The proposal was advanced in a brief prepared for presentation to the committee by representatives of 16 national associations of artists, authors, musicians, architects and players.

"In no country is less consideration given to the arts than in Canada," the brief said.

The organizations suggested establishment of a government department for supervision of all cultural activities and extension of such national services as the National Art Gallery, National Film Board and Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

CONTRIBUTORY PLAN

In a plan for community centres, the brief proposed that grants be made available from a government $10,000,000 appropriation on condition that the community and province contriute an amount equal to the Dominion grant.

For larger centres the plan called for 25 centres at a cost of about $250,000 each, to include an art gallery, library and auditorium. In smaller-sized communities, there would be 50 centres costing from $50,000 to $100,000 each and providing similar facilities on a smaller scale.

Small communities would be covered by a minimum of 500 centres costing about $20,000 each and designed to meet the needs of the community.

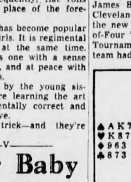

Recreational associations also proposed the creation of a national orchestral training centre, a state theatre and a national library.

Kastriner—one of the greatest bridge teams ever assembled. It was Phil Leon who discovered the number play, and here is the original hand.

South ruffed the third round of spades, then led the queen of jack of hearts, West refusing to cover. Three rounds of clubs were cashed, then the ace and king of diamonds. The lead of the diamond ten threw East in the lead. East had to lead a club or a spade—and now for the number play. South ruffed with the nine of hearts. West had to underruff with the eight or over-ruff with the king. If he over-ruffed, the trick would be won with dummy's ace, and the last trick would go to the declarer with the ten of trumps

Says Privileges Demand Citizens Protect Canada

WINNIPEG, June 22—(CP)—Premier George A. Drew of Ontario here yesterday said there must be a clear declaration that equal privileges of citizenship in Canada carry with them an obligation to protect Canada.

"Those who wear the Canadian uniform must be ready to wear it anywhere," he said in a Canadian Club luncheon address.

"Surely those of us who have read of the death on active service of Canadian women are not going to accept a situation in which men who wear the same word 'Canada' on their shoulders are going to be asked to do less than those girls willingly offered to do. This is not something which is merely a question of the present. It is a question which lies at the root of future unity in Canada."

VITAL DEBATE COMING

Col. Drew said that Canada is moving rapidly toward the "most profound debate on domestic issues since confederation.

"I am not referring to discussions in regard to the comparative merits of the Canadian variety of Marxian Socialism and the established British democratic process," he said.

"I am referring to the urgent necessity for some workable plan for Dominion-provincial co-operation in tackling the problems of peace."

There must be plans for employment, personal security; education and health, and development of natural resources.

Living Memorial To Canada's Dead Is Urged at Coast

VANCOUVER, June 22—(CP)—The greatest tribute we could pay to the memory of our soldiers who died fighting for Canada would be in the form of a living memorial, a civic recreation centre for every community, Major Ian Eisenhardt, director of the national physical fitness plan, said in an address here yesterday.

Spadework is under way which will lead to the construction of a vast national fitness organization employing more than 3,000 qualified persons to bring physical and mental recreation to every home in Canada, Major Eisenhardt said.

The Physical Fitness Act, passed by the federal government a year ago is "The corner stone of health insurance," Maj. Eisenhardt said. "It is the preventative side of such insurance."

Miss Honor Jane E. Evans Is Bride of Kenneth Pesch

Of wide interest is the marriage which took place at Christ church on Thursday at 11 a.m. of Honor Jane Elizabeth Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. E. Evans of this city, and Kenneth Pesch, of Los Angeles, Calif., son of Frank P. Pesch and the late Mrs. Pesch.

The Rev. E. S. Ottley, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Murdoch M. MacKinnon, performed the ceremony. Pink and white peonies decorated the church. Miss Dorothy Teap, church organist, played the wedding music and the choir, of which the bride is a member, sang during the service.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was smartly frocked in a pastel pink silk suit with brown hat and accessories and she carried a colonial bouquet of cream roses and freesia blossoms.

MATRON-OF-HONOR

The bride was attended by Mrs. William Hatch as matron-of-honor, wearing a powder blue two-piece crepe suit with accessories to match and a corsage of pink sweet-peas.

The best man was Lauren Groves, of Sacramento, Calif.

After the ceremony the wedding party attended a luncheon at the home of the bride's parents, where the bride's table was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and decorated with pink roses and pink columbine, and lighted by tall pink tapers.

Later in the day the couple left for Lake Louise to spend their honeymoon, the bride wearing a chocolate brown Chesterfield topcoat over her wedding frock. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Pesch will make their home in Los Angeles, where the bridegroom is an engineer with the United States Engineers.

Mrs. Pesch is a member of Delta Gamma fraternity and both she and Mr. Pesch are members of the Briarcrest Saddle Club.

Lois E. Hunter Marries Airman

All Saints' Cathedral was the scene of a quiet wedding Saturday afternoon, when Flt.-Lt. W. F. Greenfield, chaplain at No. 4 I.T.S., solemnized the marriage of Miss Lois Evelyn Hunter of Medicine Hat, and LAC. Norman Postings of Wolverhampton, Eng.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. S. Wans of Medicine Hat, and the late Thomas Hunter of Bassano and Medicine Hat, was attired in an aquamarine blue silk afternoon frock, with applique floral trimming in scroll design. A small white straw hat with veil and accessories of navy, completed her ensemble. Her corsage was of sweetheart roses and blue cornflowers.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Andrew Clark, was matron-of-honor, and chose to wear a silk jersey afternoon frock of floral pattern and small white straw hat with veiling trim. Accessories were of navy and her corsage was of Talisman roses.

Andrew Clark was groomsman.

A reception to immediate relatives and friends was held later at the Westmount home of Mr. and Mrs. Clark.

After a short honeymoon, the couple will take up residence in Lacreau.

Mrs. S. Wans, of Medicine Hat, mother of the bride, was in attendance.

Miss M. Hart Speaks to "Y"

Board of directors of the Y.W.C.A. met on Tuesday in the "Y" club room and at 3.20 p.m. heard Miss Margaret Hart give an account of her attendance at the Canadian Social Work conference held recently in Winnipeg.

"The Way to Lasting Peace," was the theme of the conference, Miss Hart said. Dr. Edward Lindeman, professor of social philosophy in Columbia university's school of social work, was an outstanding speaker. Dr. Eveline Burns, consultant on social security to the National Planning Association, Washington, D.C., and Brigadier J. C. Meakins, deputy director general of medical services, department of national defence, were also speakers.

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS

Miss Hart explained that the panel discussions in which she took part brought out helpful suggestions in relation to juvenile delinquency, adequate housing, children's aid organizations and programs, social service for dependents of men and women of the armed services, rural problems and provincial welfare organizations.

Girls' work convener for the "Y" in Edmonton, Mrs. Adrian Magrath, said on Tuesday that there was a need for more plans and programs for the 'teen age girl, and this brought in the question of more leadership. The "in-the-city-camp" date was set for Aug. 28 to Sept. 8 at the Y.W.C.A.

The following three points for discussion and action were reported from the Travellers' Aid committee: Assistance to British wives of Canadian servicemen; the discharged servicewomen; standards and working conditions for household helpers.

288 SERVICES

Total of services given by the travellers' aid secretaries during the month of May at the railway station, numbered 288. The war services committee reported giving 104 night lodgings to service women at the Y.W.C.A. Ninety-four of these girls took advantage of small services and 48 enjoyed free swims in the pool. Eight outside organizations used the club rooms for war services' meetings.

At 4 p.m. Mrs. A. J. H. Powell and her committee served tea to members of the board and staff. Miss Ruth Corner was made the recipient of a gift in appreciation for her services as physical director. Miss Corner leaves for the east at the end of August. Miss Ursula Forbes, who has been physical director at the Hamilton Y.W.C.A., succeeds Miss Corner in September.

Wife of Edmonton Airman Evacuated from Shanghai

By KAY FORD

From the war-torn, upheval of China to the comparative peacefulness of Edmonton is the experience of Mrs. R. M. Edelsten, whose husband, Cpl. Edelsten, R.C.A.F., has been stationed at No. 3 "M" Depot for the past three months.

Born in Hong Kong, China, her father, C. A. Haemelinck, is Belgian, and her mother, Russian. Mrs. Edelsten moved to Shanghai when very small and later attended the Roman Catholic convent there.

Mr. Edelsten was a member of the British-American Tobacco Company and lived for 13 years in the East, in China, Hong Kong, Moukden, Manchuria, Dairen and Shanghai.

MARRIED IN 1938

The couple married in Shanghai in 1938 and have a blond, curly-haired boy of one year.

Both Cpl. and Mrs. Edelsten were interested in amateur theatricals in Shanghai as well as golf, yachting and riding.

When the wives of the Company's men were asked to leave Shanghai in 1941, Mrs. Edelsten had a choice of going to Australia or to Vancouver. She chose the latter city and says she likes British Columbia and Alberta and hopes to see the rest of Canada.

Mr. Edelsten remained in Shanghai for several months until he was able to sail on the President Coolidge for San Francisco. This ship took 41 days to cross the ocean having to dodge submarines all the way. He landed on Christmas Day in San Francisco having commanded to be there in October to meet his wife. The boat called en route at Pearl Harbor to pick up wounded.

RETURN TO B.C.

The couple spent six months of well-earned holidays during which time Spt. Edelsten tried to go to England to join the navy and to see his brother, Commander John Edelsten of the Royal Navy. As they then gave up the idea and returned to Vancouver, where Mr. Edelsten joined the Royal Canadian Air Force.

He received training in Trenton, Ont., and has been stationed here for three months.

City Nurse Speaks Vows With New Zealand Flying Officer

Metropolitan United church was arranged with attractive bouquets of pink and white peonies on Wednesday afternoon, for the marriage of Miss Inez Alice Norem, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Norem of Edmonton and Flying Officer Robert Hill Wood, son of Mrs. E. Wood of Auckland, New Zealand. The Rev. R. McElroy Thompson officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a slipper length gown of ivory faille, fashioned with long torso and bouffant skirt. The sweetheart neckline and points of the long tapering sleeves, were outlined with lace which had formed part of her mother's wedding dress. Her long veil of embroidered net was caught with a tiny circlet of pink rose buds, and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. Her only piece of jewelry was a diamond pendant.

MAID-OF-HONOR

Miss Cathryn Zender was maid-of-honor. She chose to wear a pale lavender net over pink satin gown, with matching chapel veil held in place with pastel sweetpeas and roses.

Miss Jean Norem was her sister's bridesmaid. She wore pale blue embroidered net, with matching chapel veil and gloves. Lillies-of-the-valley formed her bouquet.

Best man was Flt.-Lt. Allan G. Noreen, R.C.A.F. Transport Command, brother of the bride. Also attending the bridegroom, was Staff Sgt. Edward Prokosch. Elmer Ironsgard was usher.

SOLOIST

Soloist, Miss Gwyneth Jones of Red Deer, wore a toe length gown of pale blue triple sheer. She sang "O Perfect Love," at the opening of the ceremony, and "I'll Walk Beside You," during the signing of the register. Mrs. J. V. Dodds was organist.

A reception to 60 guests was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Receiving, Mrs. Norem wore rose crepe, with corsage of Johanna Hill roses. The tea table, set with a snow-white damask cloth, was centred by a tiered wedding cake flanked by tall ivory tapers in crystal holders. The whole centrepiece was set on lilic. On the buffet was placed another wedding cake sent from New Zealand by the bridegroom's mother.

Pouring tea were Mrs. J. Zender and Mrs. M. Watson. Displaying the trousseau were Mrs. E. Proskosch and Mrs. R. Hanna. Assisting with the serving were Miss Jean Phillips, Miss Marion Cook, Mrs. V. Martin, Mrs. Harold Archibald, Miss Marie McLeod, Miss Margaret Sandridge, Agnes Fleming, Mrs. Elmer Ironsgard and Mrs. Doris McWhirter.

Mrs. Gwyneth Jones was in charge of the bride's book. Cables of good wishes were received from New Zealand and England.

TOAST TO BRIDE

Toast to the bride was proposed by R. Jones.

FO. and Mrs. Wood left later for a short trip to Jasper, after which they will proceed to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, where the bridegroom is stationed.

For travelling the bride wore a dressmaker suit of aquamarine wool crepe, with black and white accessories and a corsage of roses.

FO. Wood is attached to the Eastern Air Command, and his bride, a graduate of the University hospital here, recently completed a post-graduate course at McGill University, Montreal.

Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Amos Norem and E. Olson of Bimbury; Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Jones, Miss Gwyneth Jones, Red Deer, Mr. and Mrs. James Theaker and Anton Ougland of Provost; Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Upton of Berwyn; Miss Helen McCauley and W. McCauley, Tofield.

IS BETROTHED

Miss Josephine Boyar, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Boyar of Edmonton, whose engagement to Oswald Thorkleson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Thorkleson of Edmonton, is announced by her parents. The wedding will take place on June 24 in Norwood United church.

Thirty Models Chosen Here

After an extensive search, members of the Junior Hospital League have found thirty girls who may wear the mink gown and the dream wedding dress in the fashion show of clothes from "Lady in the Dark."

The children at the Provincial Special Unit at the University hospital and other Junior Hospital League members will receive benefit from the proceeds from this amazing collection of gowns.

Thirty girls will be examined and measured on Friday, June 30, by Miss Hortense Clegg, who will bring the clothes to the city. From 30, 13 models will be chosen to parade in the $20,000 worth of costumes.

MINK DRESS

Highlight of the show will be the much publicized mink dress with the long bellowing skirt of the fur, jewelled top of red and gold jewels and sequins, gloves jewelled to match, and a bolero jacket of mink and a muff of mink tails. The gown is valued at $5,400.

The parade will be held in the Empire room of the Hudson's Bay Company store on Monday, July 3, at 3 p.m. and 8 p.m. and on Tuesday, July 4, at 3 p.m. The Empire room will be decorated for this occasion. The display is called "Color and Fantasy" and is a Dorothy Gray production.

CONVENERS

Mrs. Duncan Innes and Mrs. Walter Lilgie are conveners. They say "there has been much drawing in of tummies for the past week, with young matrons vainly wishing for their lost schoolgirl figures. Members of the city set in the city have been excited about the prospect of being able to see, let alone wear, the fabulous clothes."

Tickets are on sale at the tobacco counter in the "Bay", at CJCA radio station, and from any member of the League. The entire proceeds are for the League's charities.

Export Business Market Feature

WINNIPEG, June 22—(CP)—Wheat export sales reported today on the Winnipeg grain exchange totalled 1,750,-000 bushels with the United Kingdom credited with purchase of 1,000,000 bushels top grades and the United States Commodity Credit Corporation taking 750,000 bushels feeding grades.

Rye futures prices traded generally 1½ cents above previous closing levels after showing an easier opening and ignoring early Chicago weakness. Trading was fairly active and futures closed 1⅞-1⅛ higher with July 1.11, Oct. 1.10¾, Dec. 1.09⅞, May 1.11¼.

Scarcity of offerings during the latter part of the session helped maintain a firm trend. The council of the grain exchange authorized trading in May futures for oats, barley and rye, effective today.

Robot Attacks on U.K. Are Mounting in Fury

By PHILIP AULT

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin
Copyright, 1944, by British United Press

LONDON, June 22—The robot bombing of Southern England mounted in fury today despite a savage day and night aerial bombardment of the Nazi launching ramps in France, but official sources indicated that new defensive measures were being prepared as a result of the American capture of a number of rocket bases on the Cherbourg peninsula.

The U.S. 8th Air Force hurled its Flying Fortresses and Liberators against the rocket emplacements today, bombing visually and by instruments through a scattered overcast, but there was no immediate indication of the size of the striking force.

British and American warplanes dropped possibly 2,000 tons of high explosives on the robot ramps in four trip-hammer attacks on the Pas de Calais area yesterday and last night, and the enemy's blind bombing tapered off sharply during the night.

At daybreak, however, the tempo of the Nazi assault, quickened and a steady stream of the flying bombs came in over the channel coast.

R.A.F. fighters attacked the pilotless planes far out over the channel, spraying them with a hail of gunfire that sent many crashing harmlessly into the sea.

Defensive measures appeared to have improved considerably since the start of the enemy offensive a week ago, and the incessant bombing of the Pas de Calais area was believed to have smashed many of the Nazis' rocket installations, but it was admitted that the attacks were piling up casualties and damage in Southern England.

German Casualties In Italo Fighting Approach 100,000

By SID FEDER

FIFTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Italy, June 22—(AP)—Casualties inflicted upon the Germans during the past 41 days of the Allied offensive in Italy were estimated unofficially yesterday to total 80,000 and 100,000 killed, wounded and captured.

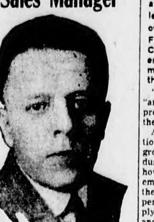

This estimate was based on the known number of Nazis captured—now more than 27,000—and the usual military "rule of thumb" that for each enemy soldier taken prisoner one is usually killed and one or two wounded.

Bungalow Raffle Set For July 22nd

The bungalow committee of the War Services Council reported at the last meeting of the board of directors that the bungalow to be given away definitely would be raffled on July 22. The committee reported that owing to the weather, progress had not been as rapid as expected but that the bungalow would be completed with a few weeks of the date set.

Mrs. George Goodall, chairman of the central committee of regimental auxiliaries, reported that proceeds of the two regimental auxiliary tag days amounted to approximately $3,755.

It was urged that the public send only current magazines to the magazine depot. Old magazines should be sent to the salvage depot. Mrs. Morris Kline reported that 15 cartons of magazines have been sent overseas.

The War Services Council would like to obtain an air-cushion for this woman and would appreciate hearing from anyone having such an article at the earliest opportunity. Please telephone 28876.

Before the Magistrate

Breach of wartime regulations brought penalties for three Edmonton persons who appeared Wednesday afternoon before Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C.

Abraham Goldman pleaded guilty to displaying fur garments without having attached a price tag or other label, and was fined $20 or 30 days. Five fur pieces were displayed, the court was told, four of which were not ticketed, and the fifth marked as "silver large."

Clara Moorman was assessed $10 or 14 days for selling oranges at a price retail in excess of the maximum selling price.

Tom Dudka, charged with renting housing accommodation at a price higher than reasonable or just, was fined $50 or three months.

John Pelechaty, said in the court of Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C., to have been disillusioned in love, pleaded guilty to assaulting Rose Doehaniuk and breaking her jaw, on Thursday morning was fined $40 and costs or 60 days imprisonment, dating from the time of his arrest June 1.

Responding to a call to the Jasper Place home of the complainant, a R.C.M.P. officer told the court that he had found her injured, and had her taken to hospital. The accused was found outside, nearby. He was placed under arrest.

Pelechaty said he and the complainant had become engaged, the latter representing herself as a single wooman. When he discovered that she was not single, he asked for his ring. The woman was loath to part with it. The accused had then struck her.

Muriel Watson, Edmonton, pleading guilty to failure to report an accident in which she was involved on May 28 last, was fined $10 or 14 days.

Raymond J. Zurbrigg, charged with dangerous driving, was assessed $30 and costs or six weeks. While driving at an estimated speed of 30 miles an hour on Jasper avenue at 104 street, he struck and injured a woman crossing the street, the magistrate was informed. The woman was taken to hospital suffering a fractured arm, facial cut and torn clothing.

Evelyn E. Prier, charged with vagrancy, was sentenced to 60 days imprisonment. Since coming to the city in May, she had held several jobs, it was stated.

Ivan Brook, Paul Bell and William Henderson pleaded guilty to permitting minors to consume liquor, and each was fined $20 or 30 days.

Says Civilians Won't Get Tires Until Late 1945

Predicting that new tires for ordinary civilian use will not be available before late in 1945, at least, I. G. Needles, sales manager of the tire department of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company of Canada, Limited, was guest speaker at luncheon meeting of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce in the Corona hotel Wednesday.

"That is not a promise," he added, "and everyone should guard his present tires as though they were the crown jewels."

An authority on the rubber situation, Mr. Needles outlined the growth of the synthetic rubber industry on this continent. He told how the product had met the emergency at a critical phase of the country's war effort, when 90 per cent. of our natural rubber supply was captured by the Japanese and said that it was not likely that the process would be dropped when the war ceases.

PROGRAM ADVANCED

"The program for manufacturing synthetic rubber is well under way. One plant alone in the United States has a total annual production capacity of 120,000 tons," he said, "amounting to nearly one half as much as German's estimated annual output."

He cited several factors which have combined to slow down cvilian tire production. The labor shortage affected the industry drastically and he pointed out that the rubber industry has experienced a larger than average increase in utilization of woman workers, saying that lately they have been employed on tire-building, formerly accepted as a man's job.

In addition to the labor shortage, the lack of production facilities to do the double job of meeting the increased military demands and to provide tires for essential civiiian vehicles, and the extra time, skill and knowledge required in using the new synthetic rubber, combine to form nearly as great a threat as the threat of lack of raw material.

"The time element is important. To make one bomber plane casing requires the same amount of time as it formerly did to produce 60 ordinary passenger-car tires," he said.

"It takes more time," the speaker said, "both man-hours and machine hours, to make products out of synthetic rubber than it does working with natural rubber."

Synthetic rubber must be milled longer before it reaches a proper state of plasticity and at least one extra operation may be required in putting together the different plies of a tire. In addition it is necessary to give workers additional training and instruction in coping with the behavior of synthetic rubber.

LIGHT TYPES GOOD

Regarding the performance of synthetic tires, Mr. Needles said it had been very commendable in passenger and light truck sizes but that tires for heavier trucks and buses had been less satisfactory.

"Under-inflation, rough roads, and other abuses are damaging to any tire, and they may be more damaging to synthetic rubber tires," he said.

Fate of the $800,000,000 synthetic rubber industry after the war is not complete oblivion, according to Mr. Needles.

"For some time to come tree rubber, after it is again available to us, is likely to be definitely cheaper than synthetic for tire-making, yet to me it seems inevitable that we—regardless of price differential—will insist on continuing at least stand-by operation of our synthetic rubber plants after the war—just as we will make sure of retaining air bases and battleships."

'I feel sure that those responsible for our defence after the war is won will want to continue to specify synthetic rubber's use in national defence equipment in sufficient amounts to assure this continuing operation. This will help assure us of adequate production capacity for use in an emergency, and at the same time afford some protection against high prices for natural rubber."

OPEN NEW MARKETS

He pointed out that the expected rise in the living standards of such countries as China and India would open up a tremendous new market for rubber products, which could not be provided for by natural rubber resources alone.

The speaker demonstrated the making of synthetic rubber to members of the club, mixing his ingredients in a beaker and ending up with a handful of rubbery substance.

He gave his listeners some idea of the dream world that may come after the war when all fabrics can be treated with Koroseal, a Goodrich wonder plastic, which sheds water yet leaves the material looking like its original self.

"For the housewife at housecleaning time it will no longer be necessary to send the curtains to the laundry. The sheerest silk or lace curtains can be treated with Koroseal and when they require cleaning you will simply hang them on the line and turn the hose on them."

"Flexible and transparent Koroseal water pipes can be twisted around corners, will not burst if the water is frozen and should a blockage occur you can easily locate it in the transparent piping."

PROUD OF INDUSTRY

Concluding his address the speaker said: "We are proud of the job that this industry has done and is doing to supply equipment for our fighting forces on all fronts. The rapidity with which our synthetic rubber plants have been built and put into production is a tribute to the skill and ingenuity of free peoples."

Sales manager of the tire division since 1930, Mr. Needles has a sound technical knowledge of the business and in 1942 he was called to Ottawa where he was named technical advisor to the rubber controller.

James Walker, vice-president of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce, was chairman of the meeting, and the speaker was introduced by George Cooper, of the advertising and sales bureau of the chamber.

Transferred

Lt.-Col. Robert Lockeridge, Edmonton District Engineer for the U.S.E.D., has been transferred to the Manhattan district at Oakridge, Tenn. He has been popular and held in high regard by everyone with whom he came in contact.

Nazis Get Surrender Ultimatum

LONDON, June 22—(CP)—An ultimatum to the German garrison of Cherbourg to surrender by 9 a.m. today, British time (1 a.m. M.D.T.), was broadcast this morning by the Allied army field radio station in Normandy. The broadcast was recorded here by the London Daily Sketch.

"If you do not stop the fight now, you will never see your homeland again," the ultimatum said.

"Your situation is desperate. Thousands of planes are waiting for the signal to rain death on you. Guns of the Allied navies are aimed at you. You have no other way out than to capitulate.

"Should you, the commandant, not surrender, you will bear full responsibility for the lives of your men.

"We give you until 9 a.m. today, June 22, to decide."

Say Resolution Led Duce to War

LONDON, June 22—(CP)—The House of Lords was told yesterday that Prime Minister Churchill believes the passing of the "white feather" resolution by the Oxford University's Union in 1933 had a "decisive influence" on Mussolini's decision to take Italy into the war.

The resolution passed by the University's debating society said "This house will in no circumstances fight for its King and country."

Maj.-Gen. Lord Mottistone said Mr. Churchill told him:

"The effect of the resolution was shattering on the continent—shattering to our prestige. We have actual proof now that Mussolini was so affected by it that he definitely came to the conclusion that Britain might be counted out. It is probable it had a decisive influence on his decision to bring Italy into the war on the side of Germany."

Lord Mottistone commented: "The young men at Oxford who passed that resolution very nearly decreed the downfall of Britain and her Empire."

He made the disclosure of Mr. Churchill's sserted belief in moving an amendment to the education bill that children should be taught 'the right and duty of a citizen is to defend his native land."

Charges Students Are Overburdened With Education

VANCOUVER, June 22—(CP)—"Canadian students are overburdened with education," Maj. Ian Eisenhardt, director of the national physical fitness plan, said in an address ehre yesterday.

'They have no time for sports after hours," Maj. Eisenhardt said. "I hope to see this rectified under the new program."

European peoples with their organized health programs were in many ways more fit physically than Canadians, he added. The benefits of health programs had been shown in Germany, Russia, Italy and especially in Japan where in two decades the Japanese had straightened their limbs and added inches to their average stature through sports activities.

The Canadian attitude in the past had been to concentrate on a few star athletes and forget the mass of the population.

'We neglect 99 per cent of the population and idolize one per cent," he said.

Living Conditions Cause of Protest

Living conditions in a tent home at 106 street and Kingsway, where Mrs. J. Graham and her four children are living, have been protested by his group, Harry Hunt, business agent of Edmonton unit, Amalgamated Building Workers of of Canada, stated Thursday.

Mrs. Graham was evicted from her Forest Heights home, and has been given the tent quarters, for which the city is charging $15 a month rent. Her husband is a private in the army.

The Building Workers' Union, of which Pte. Graham is a member in good standing, appointed an investigating committee to inspect the city-provided tent home. Its report recommends that the crown immediately put an end to such cases of eviction, and voices regret at the "utter futility on the part of city officials to attend to so simple a matter as a few evicted families."

Dampness of bedding and furniture, inadequate cooking facilities, and lack of sanitary arrangements are noted in the committee report. Designated school for children in the family is 14 blocks away.

"The school board surely could allow these children to attend a nearer school regardless of hard and fast rules," it is stated.

Believe Education Needs Can Be Met

OTTAWA, June 22—(CP)—Pensions Minister Mackenzie said yesterday that officials of his department were confident that Canadian universities and colleges would be able to accommodate service personnel returning to their studies following discharge.

Mr. Mackenzie told The Canadian Press that a survey of existing education facilities was made by his department.

He was commenting on a dispatch from New York which quoted Dr. J. Barlet Brebner, professor of history in Columbia University, as saying "the expansion of university and college facilities for the benefit of veterans will be post-war problem No. 1 for Canadian education."

The minister said the survey was made by Dr. G. M. Weir, acting director of training for the pensions department.

Dr. Weir estimated between 30,-000 and 40,000 personnel in the forces would return to university after the war.

The government was prepared to assist in providing additional accommodation if this was found necessary, but the accommodation would be only of a temporary nature to solve a temporary problem.

Robot Bomb Sites Captured by Yanks

LONDON, June 22.—(CP)—The BBC said last night American troops advancing up the Cherbourg peninsula had captured several sites from which the Germans were launching flying bombs.

Robot bases captured on the Cherbourg peninsula were taken intact, said a report from an R.A.F. base, and Allied technical experts were rushed in to examine them and speed measures to combat the flying bombs which have been sailing through south England skies intermittently.

Meanwhile German radio propagandists threatened the use of unidentified new weapons against Britain which one boasted "will put the present German weapon (flying bomb) in the shade."

Elements of Three Divisions Trapped

WASHINGTON, June 22.—(AP)—American forces in the Cherbourg peninsula have trapped elements of three German divisions in the Normandy port and its environs, War Secretary Henry Stimson reported today.

The "striking advances" which gave the Americans possession of the entire neck of the peninsula were credited in large part by the secretary to British and Canadian operations at the south-eastern end of the Normandy front. The Allied forces there "so engaged the enemy that he had no uncommitted strength to threaten the American corridor."

These British and Canadian forces, Stimson told a news conference, not only repelled German counter-attacks but drove forward to enlarge their own holdings.

Manpower Policy Again Is Rapped By John Bracken

KINGSTON, Ont., June 22—(CP)—John Bracken, national leader of the Progressive Conservative party, for the second time this week, criticized the federal government's manpower policy yesterday and said "If the government needs men overseas, as it says it does, it should call on the 70,000 men now sheltered in the home defence army at a cost of $150,000,000 a year to the taxpayer."

Addressing the annual meeting of the Frontenac-Addington Progressive Conservative Association at nearby Sharbot Lake, he said the government should call on home defence army men "Before proceeding to make demands on the boys now in industry and on farms."

(Last Monday night Mr. Bracken and C. P. McTague, chairman of the party, criticized the government's manpower regulations in addresses at Guelph, Ont.

Relief Group Gets Canada's Cheque

By C. R. BLACKBURN

WASHINGTON, June 22—(CP)—The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration yesterday received its first substantial contribution—a $6,866,936 cheque from Canada—and it was learned the second annual council meeting of the organization likely will be held in Montreal in mid-September.

The Canadian cheque was handed over by L. B. Pearson, minister counsellor of the Canadian embassy, to U.N.R.R.A. director-general Herbert Lehman. It represented 10 per cent of Canada's total contribution of $77,000,000, which was exchanged for Canadian money and a preliminary contribution of $55,000 toward running costs.

Mr. Pearson said in accordance with the U.N.R.R.A. agreement, providing that uninvaded countries contribute one per cent of their national incomes for the year ended June 30, 1943, Canada's contribution would be $77,000,000. The remainder of the contribution will be made available in the form of services and the purchase of Canadian products for the work of U.N.R.R.A.

Allies Within Sixty Miles Of Florence

By ROBERT VERMILLION

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin. Copyright, 1944, by British United Press

ROME, June 22—Allied forces hammered out "moderate" gains along the mud-clogged highways north of Grosseto and Perugia today, thrusting armored spearheads to within less than 60 miles of Florence, while British 8th army units converged on the big Adriatic port of Ancona.

American tanks and infantrymen advancing up the Tyrrhenian coast rolled back strong enemy opposition on highways one and 73, moving up to within about six miles to positions 15 miles above Grosseto.

At the same time, British army veterans drove on beyond captured Perugia toward Umbertide, 14 miles north of the cathedral city. Other British units were reported progressing through the hills to the west on a 40-mile front extending to the northern shores of Lake Chiusi.

CONVERGE ON CITY

The American spearheads were only 57 airline miles south of Florence, central pivot of the new line on which the Germans were expected to make a stand, while advanced 8th Army columns were only slightly farther from the city.

Along the Adriatic front, the 8th Army was reported sweeping ahead almost unopposed in hot pursuit of the retreating Germans.

Headquarters spokesmen revealed that Italian troops had joined the 8th Army forces on the Adriatic front.

McCoy Health Service

The permanent cure of catarrhal troubles takes some time and persistence, yet what seems to be the longest cure is really the shortest because it throws aside the non-essentials, and really settles down to the important question of correcting the cause of catarrh. The length of time that a cure will take, of course, varies with different people; however, most cases can be greatly improved in from three to six weeks. Most patients with chronic catarrh have spent several months, or even years trying to banish it without knowing that they were never more than a month or two away from the cure if they had known the right treatment to follow and had adhered to it.

In overcoming any form of chronic catarrh the main part of the treatment is to give the blood a chance to cleanse itself of accumulated waste material and will do so if given a chance. The best treatment that I have found in a short eliminative period through the use of a short alkalinizing fruit fast together with any treatments that will help the eliminative organs of the body such as the lungs, intestines, skin and kidneys. Once the blood is cleansed, the eliminative channels are opened, and no further mucous forming foods need be supplied, the mucous membranes return to a healthy state and the natural tendency disappears. The fruit or fruit juice fast without the addition of other foods supplies the body with an abundance of alkaline-forming minerals without requiring any particular effort of the digestive tract so that the vitality of the body may be turned to good use in speeding up the elimination of toxins. During the fast and for some time following the fast, drink a glass of the daily enemas of plain water in order to speed up the intestinal elimination. To avoid drinking several glasses of water or even one or two gallons of water in order to speed up elimination through the kidneys and a long sweat to open up the pores of the skin is excellent.

Following the fasting period, you may vary from five days to two or three times that length of time according to the condition of the patient, one should see that he avoids for a time the starches and sugars, as most catarrhal patients are not assimilating these foods by oxidizing them properly; and it is also advisable to be careful of food combinations as the wrong ones may produce fermentation with still more irritating acids to inflame the mucous membranes. The after diet for catarrh should consist of an abundance of cooked and raw non-starchy vegetables in order to supply mineral elements and bulkage, and the patient should also use some meat, gelatine and cooked dried fruits to provide elements required by the system. He should avoid high caloric foods of every variety. All known methods to build up the health are to be used including physical culture exercises, fresh air, walking, daily sponge baths, brisk rubbing of the skin, light clothing, etc., and the use of the sunbath is helpful.

All questions regarding health and diet will be answered. Large stamped, self addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, The McCoy Building, 1151 West 6th Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

Canadian Tanks Gave Infantry Aid

By ROSS MUNRO

WITH CANADIAN TANKS IN FRANCE, June 22—(CP)—From the beaches at Juno, Bernieres and Bernieres to the Caen-Bayeux highway 10 and 12 miles inland three Canadian tank regiments—the 1st Hussars, London, Ont., the Fort Gary Horse, Winnipeg, and the Sherbrooke Fusiliers—fought their beachhead battle alongside the Canadian 3rd division.

The support this formation with its Sherman tanks gave the infantry was one of the big factors in the splendid performance of the Canadians in the first week of the invasion when the enemy countered with heavy blows at positions northeast of Caen.

In the assault the most successful landing was made by the 1st Hussars who landed on the beaches at Courseulles where the Western Canada Brigade—Royal Winnipeg Rifles, Canadian Scottish, Victoria—came ashore. The unit came in from a rough sea on time, and were practically under the muzzles of German anti-tank and field guns in concrete emplacements and dugouts just back of the beach. They blasted shells at these defences and with the prairie infantrymen stormed through the sand dunes and worked their way into Courseulles where they helped to clear out the town.

HINT FINNISH CABINET MAY ASK ARMISTICE

STOCKHOLM, June 22—(AP)—The Finnish government crisis was reported by the newspaper Svenska Dagbladet last night to have been "defacto solved," a phrase taken to mean that the cabinet was reformed and presumably now could turn to Moscow for armistice conditions. Svenska Dagbladet said a Finnish statement on the political situation was expected Thursday.

News Freedom Is Held Major Post-War Need

NEW YORK, June 22—(AP)—A free exchange of information among nations is a "major necessity" in the successful operation of a world security organization after this war, Adolf A. Berle, Jr., assistant secretary of state, declared last night.

His endorsement of the principle of international news freedom apparently placed it among the objectives of United States foreign policy for the post-war world. Berle spoke before the Foreign Press Association.

COMMITMENT MADE

United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China, committed themselves at Moscow to work out as soon as practicable a world peace organization, he said.

"It is not too much to say that freedom of information is a major necessity if world organization is to succeed. With freedom of information there is possibility of understanding between peoples. Without it, the way is always open to build up misunderstanding, suspicion, fear and finally hatred."

Sir Keith Murdoch, Australian publisher who arrived here by plane from Montreal, told the association there should be a post-war "open door" on news.

"Let us decide that after the war we shall have no censorship; that furthermore we shall have no propagandists," he said.

HONEST JOURNALISM

"One thing that has grown up during the war in even the freest countries," he added, "is the propagandist, the publicity officer, attached to the government officers and very numerous politicians. They have their purpose now, but will have none after the war when all that is needed will be an open door to the trustworthy journalist."

Earlier, in an interview, Sir Keith predicted the Allies must expect at least another two years of "grimmest fighting" before Japan is beaten.

Sir Keith said plans already were under way to move British divisions to the Pacific when Hitler is defeated, adding that Japan still had 100 divisions.

Sir Keith is managing director of the Melbourne Herald and affiliated newspapers popularly known as the Murdoch chain.

Postmasters To Consider Resolutions

CALGARY, June 22.— (CP) — Increase in commissions allowed on sale of unemployment insurance stamps by post offices is sought in a resolution to be placed before the annual conference of the Alberta branch of the Canadian Postmasters' Association Thursday.

Post office hours of 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. instead of 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. are proposed in another resolution.

Assistance of postmasters in disseminating information on the benefits available to ex-service personnel of the present war was asked by S. C. Heckbert, president of the Alberta branch, Canadian Legion, in an address to the delegates, yesterday afternoon.

EARN PROMOTION

Opportunity for postmasters to earn promotion within the service is being urged upon the federal government by their organization, said Don Taylor, president of the Alberta branch, asking Mr. Heckbert to explain the Legion attitude toward this policy. "It has met opposition from the Legion at times," said Mr. Taylor.

The Legion was on record as favoring promotion within the civil service, replied Mr. Heckbert, and would support the general policy outlined by Mr. Taylor. Many of the postmasters were veterans of the last war and the Legion took the position that veterans should be given preference in promotion.

Major portion of yesterday afternoon's session was devoted to instruction in post office routine by William Botting, clerk in charge of the postage stamp supply depot, Calgary.

Regina Rifles Overcame Opposition

Western Assault Forces Beat Foe In Ten Days of Bitter Fighting

By WILLIAM STEWART

WITH THE CANADIANS IN FRANCE, June 22—(CP)—A western Canadian assault battalion, the Regina Rifles, fought hard for more than a week after landing in Normandy, June 6, and battled its way to its inland objective where it held off a series of German counter-attacks.

The western troops experienced every form of enemy opposition and fire from snipers' bullets and machine-guns to shelling and bombardment by German multi-barrelled mortars.

They engaged counter-attacking enemy armor at such close quarters it was only a matter of directing their Piat bombs across a narrow village street. None of the enemy attempts to dislodge them from their positions in the front line of the British-Canadian bridgehead succeeded.

SUFFERED CASUALTIES

The battalion suffered casualties both in the landing and in the battles of the next few days. Two company commanders were killed and a third was wounded. A number of other ranks also died or were wounded in those bitter 10 days.

The first company to touch down, at 8:05 a.m. on D-Day, landed to the left of the river Seulles in front of Courseulles Sur Mer. Its commander, Maj. D. D. Grosch, Regina, was wounded in the landing. Minutes later a second company landed. Both companies had to fight their way ashore.

The second company was held up by heavy fire but the assault troops worked their way through the line of casements and pillboxes which were the backbone of the beach defences.

CRAFT STRIKES MINE

A half-hour after the original landing, Maj. C. S. T. Tubb, North Battleford, Sask., led his company ashore but the assault craft carrying a fourth company struck a mine before getting to the beach and Maj. J. V. Love of Regina lost his life.

The Reginas cleared the seaside town of Courseulles in a street fight and filled three miles inland to Reviers where they took up positions for the night in a woods near the village.

The battalion got off to an early start the next day and headed farther inland, supported by tanks. Fighting was comparatively light though here and there enemy pockets of resistance tried to hold out.

Just about noon, the battalion's leading elements reached the objective at Bretteville Le Lorgueilleux, about seven miles from the beaches. The little village was the most forward position on the front and the troops dug in solidly around the enemy side of the settlement. The stand the Reginas made at Bretteville was one of the outstanding series of actions in the early battle of the bridgehead.

STILL IN COMMAND

Tubb still was in command of his company. Companies whose commanders had been lost now were led by Major E. G. Syme, Regina, and Captains G. D. Brown of Manor, Sask., and R. W. Shawcross, Regina. Major A. S. Gregory, North Bay, Ont., was second in command of the battalion.

The first counter-attack on the Bretteville position which the Reginas held for more than a week altogether was delivered the night of June 7. It was turned back.

Brown's company was under mortar fire next morning then the enemy was seen prowling about. At the same time, Symes' men reported enemy movement in front of them and enemy tanks in considerable strength.

Tubb's company also reported sighting German tanks and artillery fire was brought down to stave off their attack.

PERSISTENT ATTEMPTS

That enemy movement in front of the Reginas was the start of persistent enemy attempts against Bretteville.

The strongest enemy attack, in which panther tanks moved right up to Bretteville, came that night, just after midnight. The 45-ton panthers shelled and machine-gunned battalion headquarters as they rolled toward the village from the east.

Enemy tanks roared around the village almost until the first light of morning, but Piat and mortar fire and sturdy six-pounder anti-tank guns accounted for at least five of them.

One Panther got right into the village and its commander demanded that the Reginas surrender. At the time tanks were reported practically everywhere on the battalion's front.

The Reginas' answer to the surrender demand was to knock out the tank by combination methods, including two Piat shots through the turret and grenades which broke its track.

A reconnaissance tank, smaller than the Panther, which got about 20 yards farther into the village also was knocked out.

MASS PUSH FAILS

Early the following morning, enemy infantry attempted a mass push through the position held by Tubb's company. They failed, losing men by the dozen. Some estimates of the enemy loss in that one push were as high as 150.

The attack may have broken the spirit of the enemy troops in front of the Reginas because there were no other serious attacks thereafter. Most of the enemy activity from then on was confined to mortar bombardments and shelling.

The Reginas were the first Canadian troops in France to experience bombardment by the German six-barrelled "Moaning Minnie." The Minnies fell June 14, but caused only one casualty.

Recently the Reginas have been able to get a bit of rest. During the lull, Capt. J. G. Baird of Regina has been catching up on the battalion's war diary. He was one of the first Canadians promoted in France, moving up from lieutenant the day after the landing.

Get Reinforcements

Canucks, Back in Top Form, "Just Dying" for New Fight

By ROSS MUNRO

WITH THE CANADIANS IN FRANCE, June 22.—(CP)—British troops in the Tilly Sur Seulles sector are making new gains and the American forces are descending upon Cherbourg like a riptide, while the situation remains fairly static in the narrow, eastern end of the Normandy beachhead. This has given the Canadians an opportunity to get back into top form for the next attack.

A lieut.-colonel from Windsor, Ont., said at headquarters yesterday: "This Canadian force now is in better shape than when it landed in France. The troops learned a lot about war since the Beach assault. Reinforcements have come up and have been blooded with veterans and everybody is just dying for another fight."

The enemy, in small pockets, remains in dug-in positions on the Caen perimeter and shows little inclination to come out of the trenches. There has been some German shelling all along this front, but scarcely enough to wake the Canadians in their bivouacs.

YANKS 'BIG NEWS'

The big news on our front is the American successes in the Cherbourg peninsula. Officers back from that area say the Americans are "doing a whale of a job and giving the enemy a real shellacking in close combat."

The sea is rough and slowed up landing of supplies in the build-up for further advances from the beachhead but it is not creating any critical situation.

British troops have been fighting savage actions on the Tilly front and battles for the little town of Hottot, two miles southwest of Tilly, have been raging for more than 30 hours.

The British troops have been doing well in this slugging match and their positions west of the Canadians is becoming steadily stronger.

The Germans have been trying to bolster the battle lines by bringing in more guns. There is no evidence of railway guns yet being used, but the enemy is firing massive artillery.

Extension of Ban On Grain Import Duty Is Sought

WASHINGTON, June 22.—(CP)—Spasmodic committee attention was being given yesterday to a bill introduced by Representative P. G. Holmes (Rep., Mass.) to extend for six months the suspension of import duties on grains used for feeding purposes, but there was little indication the measure could pass before the summer recess of congress.

The original measure to suspend these duties and encourage import of Canadian grains for feed purposes was passed last December for a period of 90 days and renewed for a second 90-day period that expired June 19.

So far as could be learned here the restoration of duty collections, ordered by the treasury Tuesday, will not interfere with what importation is now possible since the feed grain is brought in by a government agency.

Senator Calls For Revision Of Tax Policy

OTTAWA, June 22—(CP)—Revision of the government's income and excess profit tax policy was called for by Senator John Haig (PC—Manitoba) speaking in the Senate yesterday.

Senator Haig, acting Progressive Conservative leader, also expressed criticism of the government for its manpower policy and said either conscription for overseas service should be adopted or men now available only for service in Canada should be released for work in factories and on farms.

DEBATE WAR BILL

Discussion of government policies came when the $3,057,000,000 war appropriation bill was up for second reading. Debate will be continued Thursday.

In the reconstruction period first priority should go to members of the forces and second to workers in war industry, but industry under the heavy burden of excess profits tax could not assure large postwar employment, Senator Haig said.

The present policy of corporation taxes, coupled with a high personal income tax, was unfair.

If I were a C.C.F.-er and wanted to put the corporations out of business I would continue this type of tax," he said.

Senator Haig suggested the income tax exemption for single persons should be raised from $660 to $1,000 and for married persons from $1,200 to $2,000. Those who felt the burden of income tax most severely were those with incomes of $3,000 or less.

The government's mutual aid bill was given second reading and sent to the banking and commerce committee.

Berlin's Fires Are Rekindled By Mosquitoes

By WALTER CRONKITE

Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin

Copyright, 1944, by British United Press

LONDON, June 22—R.A.F. Mosquitoes rained 2,000-pound bombs on Berlin last night to rekindle large fires in the mass of debris left in the German capital by heavy bombers from an American aerial armada which opened the first shuttle operations between Britain and Russia.

The raid on Berlin, the fifth by Mosquito bombers since the invasion, was part of widespread R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. operations which sent fighter-escorted Lancasters and Halifaxes on new attacks against the robot plane launching installation in northern France and industrial targets in Germany's Ruhr and Rhineland.

While the specific objectives in the Reich's industrial belt were not identified, the ministry described the attack as "heavy" and the scope of the night attacks was indicated with announced loss of 40 bombers in the entire operations.

GIVE NAZIS NO REST

As all German territory was brought within range of every compass point by the new shuttle system to Russia, the Allies apparently did not intend to give the Nazis any rest. A big force of Allied fighter planes headed across the Channel toward Boulogne today and was followed by an even larger formation which appeared to include bombers, en route to the same target.

Supreme headquarters announced that two squadrons of fighter planes accompanied the big U.S. bombers all the way to Russian bases yesterday—the same day the eighth U.S. air force sent more than 2,200 four-engined bombers and fighters over Berlin in its greatest strike at the Nazi capital.

Two New Members Of Quebec Cabinet

QUEBEC, June 22.—(CP)—Retirement of Labor Minister Rochette and appointment of two new cabinet members were announced yesterday by Premier Godbout.

Mr. Godbout refused to comment on a query as to whether the date of the Quebec general election had been set.

Rumors around the legislative buildings Tuesday night were that the cabinet would announce dissolution of the 21st legislature yesterday and the date of the election would be set for July 31.

The two new cabinet members appointed—both without portfolio —were Maurice Gingues, member of parliament for Sherbrooke, and J. A. Francoeur, member of the Quebec legislative assembly for Montreal Mercier.

Mr. Rochette was prevented through illness from carrying out his duties as minister of labor and mines and administration of both departments was handled by Hon. Wilfred Hamel, minister of lands and forests.

No successor has been named for Mr. Rochette who has been appointed a judge of the magistrate's court.
